Nixon turns 60, looks ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, observing his milestone 60th birthday today, says he "hopes to do great things" in the first four years of his seventh decade.

He doesn't feel old, he says. And to keep thinking young he suggests looking to the future, not the past, and staying in contact with younger people.

Nixon granted a birthday-eve interview to two news-service reporters, provided the discussion was limited solely to his birthday reflections. He took time out from working on his inagural address for a 25-minute talk in his Executive Office Building hideaway.

The President said he doesn't like observing birthdays annually anymore and prefers to make note of them only on the decades—"every 10 years."

He cited his 10-year milestones starting at age 20 when he was "a junior in college, majoring in history and English, going out for football— "but I never made the team."

At 30, he was in Bougainville in the South Pacific in World War II. At 40, he had just been elected vice president. At 50, he was just defeated for the governorship of California and at 60, just re-elected for a second presidential term.

Never in those decades, "least of all at 50, did I expect to be here at this time at 60," Nixon commented.

He said he expects his daughters and Rebozo, who recently turned 60 himself, will give him a "pretty good kidding" about passing the milestone.

Nixon would not set an ideal age for the presidency because so much depends on the needs of the nation and the times, he said. But "the presidency is a very demanding position, physically, mentally and emotionally." Unless a man has "a remarkable physique in all these respects he should not seek the presidency at an age up in the late 60s," Nixon said.

The chief executive said there were plenty of exceptions and he pointed to men in their 70s and 80s that he had known, including President Dwight D. Eisenhower, German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, French President Charles de Gaulle and Japanese Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida. All these men, Nixon said, "did not look back, they were not living in the past, they were living in the future."

"Never slow down the brain, never slow down the spiritual heart, then age is not going to pull you down," the President said.

Nixon said boredom, rather than burdens of office, causes breakdown in health, and added that "the presidency has many problems but boredom is the least of them."

Talks show no signs of results

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger conferred with Le Duc Tho for six hours today in the second session of their Vietnam peace talks as Hanoi declared in a broadcast that "there has not been any sign showing that the negotiations will reach any results."

President Nixon's national security adviser was the host of the meeting in an American-owned villa overlooking a golf course in suburban St. Nom la Breteche. As at Monday's meeting on Communist ground, there was no public handshaking between the two sides, reflecting the apparent chilly atmosphere of the talks following the massive American bombing raids on North Vietnam.

But Tho and his advisers emerged smiling from the villa at the end of the meeting, in marked contrast with their grim expressions when the meeting began. Kissinger also directed a wan smile toward waiting newsmen and photographers when he left the villa a few minutes later.

Both sides maintained their mutually agreed news blackout over the subjects under discussion.

The two delegations lunched in the villa, the property of a wealthy American businessman. It was not known whether Kissinger and Tho lunched together, but food was provided by the U.S. delegation.

While the meeting was in progress, President Georges Pompidou of France told a news conference he was "bitterly disappointed" when the talks broke down on Dec. 3.

"I hope with all my heart that the negotiations succeed this time," he added, "and that we will not have an eternal succession of discussions in Paris and bombing raids in North Vietnam."

Pompidou kept closely on touch with both sides during the interruption of the peace talks and his government played a role in backstage contacts that led to the bombing halt above the 20th parallel and resumption of the peace talks.

Summons of tax papers allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has a right to compel bookkeepers and accountants to turn over tax records of their clients, the Supreme Court held today by a 7-2 vote.

While specifically avoiding a hard and fast rule, the majority said a Roanoke, Va., restaurant operator had no right to assert her Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination when her bookkeeper was hit with an Internal Revenue summons for her tax records.

In dissent, Justice William O. Douglas said the decision could lead to government invasions of privacy which will "stultify the exchange of ideas that we have considered crucial to our democracy."

Writing for the majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said, "it is important to reiterate that the Fifth Amendment privilege is a personal privilege: It adheres basically to the person, not to the information which may incriminate him."

"The criterian for Fifth Amendment immunity remains not the ownership of property, but the 'physical or moral compulsion exerted, Powell wrote quoting from an earlier decision.

The case arose when Mrs. Lillian V. Couch appealed a Richmond Circuit Court decision which upheld the summons to her tax consultant. She claimed that the summons violated her Fifth Amendment rights and her rights under the Fourth Amendment to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures. Her records for 1964-1968 were summoned from Harold L. Shaffer, a bookkeeper who has aided Mrs. Couch with her taxes from his office above a drug store since 1955.

Mrs. Couch maintained that the Internal Revenue Service was not only examining her tax returns but was considering criminal prosecution.

Mrs. Couch's complaint stemmed from the revelation of possibly incriminating information, Powell wrote, not from the manner in which it was extracted.

Such divulgence, he continued, where the individual was not coerced, "is a necessary part of the process of law enforcement and tax investigaton."

Escorts can retaliate beyond 20th parallel

SAIGON (AP) — President Nixon has authorized U.S. fighter escorts to attack North Vietnamese MIGs or surface-to-air missile sites above the 20th parallel if they threaten American B52s below the northern limit Nixon has placed on the bombing of North Vietnam, reliable sources reported today.

The U.S. Command announced today that an Air Force F4 Phantom shot down a MIG21 along the 20th parallel Sunday when it threatened a flight of B52s.

U.S. sources outside the Command indicated today that Hanoi Radio was not lying when it reported last week that U.S. fighters escorting reconnaissance planes attacked antiaircraft defenses in Hoa Binh Province south of Hanoi. The U.S. Command denied at the time that American planes had bombed pre-selected targets above the 20th parallel, but it refused to comment on reconnaissance operations and what action fighter escorts might have taken.

It was the fifth MIG reported downed by U.S. crews since Dec. 18. The U.S Command said a total of 183 North Vietnamese jets have been downed during the war.

Thirty-nine B52s dropped about 1,100 tons of bombs in the North Vietnamese panhandle during the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today, U.S. sources said.

Existence of second sniper not yet certain

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Police, seeking clues for a possible second gunman in a sniper incident that left six persons dead, kept a downtown hotel closed today and checked records and leads in other places.

Numerous questions remained unanswered, and Police Supt. Clarence Giarrusso said he would meet with newsmen to discuss some of them, particularly those he refused to talk about Monday night after police searched the hotel and failed to find a second gunman they had thought was on the roof.

Among reports checked out, police said, was one at midday Tuesday that there had been a new shooting in another building. The reports proved erroneous, a spokesman said.

A major unsolved question involved what evidence police might have that there was more than a single sniper at the hotel.

Giarrusso acknowledged Monday night there could have been just one, but he also said there could have been two or three that police let get away — or that escaped because they were smart. He would not talk about other evidence at the time.

Among potential evidence being checked, apparently, were comments by police sharpshooters who said they had seen more than one sniper.

Policeman John E. Fields, who was in the 10th floor of City Hall, three blocks from the hotel, with a 12-power telescopic sight on his elephant gun, told The Associated Press, "I could see two others. One of them I saw clearly enough to tell what he looks like. The other figure was less distinct, but I could see it clearly enough to tell it was another guy."

Fields, who was not allowed to fire the powerful, .300-caliber weapon for fear of killing police in buildings behind the target, said of the sniper who was killed, "I saw him before he got shot, sticking his nose out and looking around."

Capt. Edward LaPorte, beside Field with less powerful binoculars, also said there "appeared to be another guy firing with" the sniper.

Policeman Frederick O'Sullivan, wounded Monday morning in a stairwell near the roof, said he saw the man, or at least the muzzle blasts from his weapon.

Other policemen said they heard more than one man talking on the roof.

If the sniper killed Sunday night by police gunfire was not alone, how did any other sniper get away?

Rebel army goes into action in Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Under a moonless sky on the night of Dec. 21 ragged trousered raiders opened fire with rockets and bullets on Marc De Borchgrave's lonely farm house in the Zambezi Valley of Rhodesia.

Two nights later the black guerrillas struck again, against neighbor Archie Dagleish's place, where the De Borchgraves had taken refuge.

Within a few hours, a Jeepload of four Rhodesian soldiers taking part in a big sweep ran over a land mine.

The world's newest "liberation army" was in action. It even has its own Ho Chi Minh Trail, meandering from base camps in neighboring Mozambique to the sunbaked bushlands of northeast Rhodesia, 120 miles north of Salisbury, the capital.

Equipped also, so the Rhodesians say, with a modern armory of weapons from the Soviet Union or China.

The Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army, or Zanla, has vowed to wrest Rhodesia — which it calls Zimbabwe — from the grip of Premier Ian Smith's white minority government.

Since they still hope to play a role in Rhodesia, the British are following with great interest these developments in the African territory that declared its independence in 1965.

British experts think the black guerrillas have a long way to go and a lot to learn before they can pose any real threat to Smith's forces. In eight years of sporadic campaigning, they have achieved little.

Yet authorities here acknowledge the danger to the white regime is certain to increase as Zanla improves its techniques and its links with rebel movements in neighboring countries. The nearest and strongest of these is the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique, or Frelimo. By ambushes, night raids, mining of roads and railroads, Frelimo for years has pinned down thousands of Portuguese troops.

New fighting in northeast Rhodesia also creates yet another front for Smith's limited forces. Already he has 1,000 miles of frontier to defend eastward against incursions from Frelimo units in Mozambique, to the northwest against Zanla raids from Zambia, and on the southwest where Rhodesia meets Botswana. He is being helped by South African police units, and he is pressing for ever fiercer action by Portuguese forces.

This week Smith called up army, police and air force reservists to meet the developing emergency.

On Monday, a South African police car detonated a mine close to the Rhodesian-Zambian border, killing two South African policeman and injuring two others and three Rhodesians. The Rhodesian government said pamphlets from a terrorist organization operating in Zambia were found at the scene, and today it closed the border with Zambia. The Salisbury government demanded that the Zambian government "no longer permit terrorists to operate against Rhodesia from their territory."

The British are hoping that time and experience will yet convince Smith's regime that its ultimate salvation lies in a constitutional settlement with Britain.

Along with the security problem, Rhodesia now is in the grip of a choking drought. It still remains an outlaw among most nations. Old friends in Australia and New Zealand have lost power. Continuation of sanctions will go on sapping the country's economy.

All these things, in London's eyes, should strengthen the case of those Rhodesians who argue for a compromise with Britain.

Critic Shalit

Wild man joins 'Today'

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Gene Shalit will join the regular cast of NBC's "Today" show next Monday. So prepare yourself. He's a wild man in both word and appearance.

He's also one of the few movie critics in this hamlet with a sense of humor, a serious crime in Manhattan reviewing circles.

Physically, he resembles a free-lance anarchist. His hair goes in all directions and he sports a thick black mustache.

Some of us already know him as the movie critic whose reviews are seen on WNBC-TV here, KNBC-TV in Los Angeles and 100 other assorted NBC television affiliates around the land.

Others may know him as the guy who writes zany outbursts for the Ladies Home Journal, Newsday and Sport magazine.

Still others may know him as the movie reviewer on NBC's "Monitor" radio show or as the "Today" book editor since 1969.

It'll be good to see him turned loose on a thrice-a-week basis on "Today," where he'll continue as book editor, but he also will have a crack at sports and the lighter side of life, if such still exists.

His approach basically is that of a guy who bumps into a pal at the neighborhood tavern and tells him he's just seen a movie. A dog of a movie, sometimes. A great flick, at other times.

But he never proclaims the film " a profoundly moving experience" or some such lofty bilge. That's the best part about him. He works in plain English, with sharp, funny observations.

Shalit was born 41 years ago in Manhattan. He came to broadcasting in a roundabout way. He started off as a freelance writer, than began doing a column for the Ladies Home Journal. He also became movie critic for the now-defunct Look magazine.

He was at work committing scrivened mayhem one day when the phone rang. An NBC executive was on the other end.

"He said, "I've been reading some of the things you write, and I've been wondering,'" Shalit recalled. "'Do you think you can talk out loud the way you write?'"

Whereupon Shalit went to audition for NBC radio. The rest is history, but he still gives his audition bad reviews.

"I tended to orate," he said. "Instead of talking to one person I was talking to "the multitudes' and that's not the way to do it. Now, it never occurs to me that anybody's watching or listening. And maybe they're not."

Met announces its Minneapolis slate

The Metropolitan Opera company will visit Minneapolis for seven grand operas from the current repertoire, from May 21-26.

The schedule, with all performances at 8 p.m. except as indicated:

— Verdi's "Aida" (Wednesday, May 23).

— Verdi's "Il Trovatore" (Friday, May 25).

— Rossini's "The Barber of Seville" (1:30 p.m., Saturday, May 26).

— Donizetti's "Licia di Lammermoor" (Saturday, May 26).

All performances will be at Northrup Auditorium on the University of Minnesota campus at Minneapolis.

This will be the 29th annual week of opera in the upper midwest to be presented by the Met. The entire New York company of over 300 members — internationally-known singers, conductors, dancers, chorus members and a full orchestra — will be involved in regional opera festival.

Co-chairmen of the ticket committee in the Fox Cities are Mrs. John G. Kellogg and Mrs. Johannes Van den Akker, both of Appleton.

Those interested in further information should contact either Mrs. Kellogg, 8 Brokaw Pl.; Mrs. Van den Akker, 1 Brokaw Pl.; Mrs. Arthur B. Johnson Jr., 2516 Crestview Dr., or Mrs. James Grist, 24 Winona Ct.

Following the pioneers

9-10 Channel 5 — Alistair Cooke follows the route of the early pioneers in "Gone West," the fifth episode of America. Cooke covers the trek westward from the Appalachians to the California gold rush. Visiting the site where Louisiana was officially purchased, Cooke discusses Thomas Jefferson, who didn't consult the Senate about the transaction. Through the use of maps and paintings, viewers learn about "The Trail of Tears" and Andrew Jackson's defiance of a Supreme Court decision by forcing the Indians off their lands.

7:30-9 Channels 9-11 — If you never saw or read "Rosemary's Baby," then you may be frightened by "The Devil's Daughter," on Tuesday Movie of the Week. Had Rosemary's child been a daughter, this would have been the 21 years later follow-up to that story and its predictability keeps the chills from coming as fast as they should. However, it is possible to enjoy a delightfully flamboyant performance from Shelley Winters and a good dramatic one from Belinda Montgomery. Also, there are some nice scenes from Barbara Sammeth as Belinda's horse-loving roommate.

7:30-8:30 Channels 2-7 — Hawaii Five-O has a good cast in a suspenseful episode. Patty Duke plays a tough cookie who has a deal for McGarrett (Jack Lord). She and boy friend Larry Kert are facing an armed robbery charge. She'll testify that she saw a top gang lord kill a rival if: she and Kert can get married, have a plush weekend honeymoon and she can pick her Maid of Honor. She chooses Carol Lawrence, as a successful news photographer, and a former flame of McGarrett's.

8-9 Channel 5 — William Shatner gives a good performance on The Bold Ones, which examines a new kind of surgery to relieve angina sufferers. Four men, (Shatner, a businessman about to be married, Burt De Benning, a pro baseball player, Alfred Ryder, a retired man, and Sidney Clute, an optimistic building contractor) are admitted to the hospital as surgery prospects.

Ballet star will assist in kickoff of Milwaukee series

MILWAUKEE — Cynthia Gregory, probably the best known in Milwaukee of the American Ballet Theatre's stars, will be in the city on Monday to assist in launching the ticket sales campaign for Mid America Ballet Foundation, the sponsors of the week of ballet at the Performing Arts Center.

The New York and Washington based company will perform seven programs April 2 — 7.

Miss Gregory will appear in Vogel Hall of the Performing Arts Center at 1:30 p.m. Monday before 550 volunteers who will be taking ticket orders throughout Wisconsin.

The popular star has appeared locally with the Milwaukee Ballet Company as well as being featured in several programs during the American Ballet Theatre's 1972 run at the PAC. Miss Gregory made her debut as "Giselle" here in Milwaukee. She is scheduled to appear frequently during the forthcoming engagement.

Advance ticket sales for the April engagement will start Monday. The box office sale opens March 1. Those subscribing in advance will receive preferential seating. Attendance in Milwaukee last year was the greatest of any town on the American Ballet Theatre's tour.

Janesville Republican says state party has lost touch with people

JANESVILLE, Wis. (AP) — Tom Jeffris says disenchantment with what he calls the state Republican party's disdain for local units is among his reasons for quitting as Rock County's GOP chairman.

"The state party doesn't listen to the people at the local level," he said, citing the Wisconsin GOP's often-censured method of choosing candidates for state executive office and the U.S. Senate.

Jeffris, 29, a business executive, complained about the status of a "centralized party" based in Madison, the state capital, but declined to "get into personalities."

The state GOP chairman, John Hough, is a Janesville resident.

Jeffris' announcement that he won't seek another term when Republicans hold their spring organizational meetings was accompanied by a similar announcement that Carolyn Allen of Evansville is quitting as a county GOP vice chairman.

Mrs. Allen was defeated Nov. 7 in her attempt to regain a seat in the state Assembly. Jeffris listed her electoral setback among Republican election defeats which he said demonstrate "something has gone wrong" with the party.

Republican leaders seem disinterested in strengthening political grass roots, he said.

"The people at the top," he said, "just aren't listening.

"The party seems to be divided between those who want more local responsibilities at the county level and those who want a tightly centralized party," he said.

Jeffris complained about the state party's system of having conventions endorse state executive and U.S. Senate candidates who are nominated by party leaders.

"We should have an open primary and let the people select the candidates," Jeffris said.

He cited the 1970 gubernatorial race in which former Lt. Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, winner of a vigorous Democratic battle with Donald O. Peterson of Eau Claire, routed the candidate whom the GOP state convention had endorsed.

Jeffris also cited the 1970 Senate contest, in which Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., overwhelmingly defeated a former basketball coach who similarly had been endorsed by convention.

Grass-roots sympathies are stirring in the GOP, and decentralized organization may materialize by the time Republicans open their state convention May 19 in La Crosse, Jeffris said.

"At the state convention last June, grass-roots Republicans took the first step in turning the party around," he said. "It is hoped these same types of people will be elected this spring."

Heating fuel situation could reach critical stage

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The director of the state Office of Emergency Government said today the heating fuel situation could reach a critical stage with continued cold weather.

"I don't think there are any cold homes," James Gruentzel said. "But if this cold weather continues it could become critical."

Gruentzel said several fuel oil companies have stocks for a week or until Jan. 25.

Robert Felker of the Wisconsin Petroleum Association also said the problem has worsened with the recent cold weather.

He said, however, the association will keep its pledge to keep homes warm "as much as we can."

Meanwhile, Mobile Oil Co. notified the state it would supply only 375,000 gallons of fuel oil each month to the University of Wisconsin heating plant, according to Don Koch of the state Department of Administration.

Frank G. Rice Jr., director of the university physical plant, said the UW will be able to continue because it is able to use gas, oil and coal fuel.

Robert Dunn, executive secretary to Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, said the executive office is studying the situation statewide.

His comment came as John Byrnes of Byrnes Oil Co., Madison, criticized the governor's office for not helping the fuel oil industry.

"You ought to talk to the governor's emergency government office," he said to a reporter. "I don't know if they're ignoring it, but it doesn' seem they're doing anything either.

Group wants wardens returned to field work

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The executive council of the Wisconsin Conservation Congress would support a proposed $2 increase in fees for hunting and fishing licenses if the state returned conservation wardens to their traditional role, the council said during the weekend.

In its first meeting of 1973, the council voted unanimously Saturday to ask the legislature to expand the current warden force by 25 men and make it a separate unit within the Department of Natural Resources. It was critical of the way law enforcement field work has been conducted, and with what it called an increased emphasis on supervision.

DNR has proposed the increase for resident hunting and fishing license fees, and Kent Klepinger, a DNR spokesman, said it was needed to fund rising operational costs.

Without the fee increase, he said, all conservation programs would be reduced by 20 per cent.

The DNR's fish and game and law enforcement budget gets about 81 per cent of its funds from license fees.

Walter Zelinsky, chief of the state warden service, said reorganization had closed 8 or 10 warden stations.

"Too many wardens are involved in environmental protection work and policing snowmobilers," Francis Murphy, chairman of the council, said.

In other business, a DNR game manager said the agency would propose three rule changes this year: Statewide grouse season to replace zone regulations; rewriting the Horicon goose tagging law to prohibit manipulation of tags while dead birds are being transported off the marsh, and prohibiting use of buckshot statewide.

A spokesman for Great Lakes fish management said his agency would propose changes to: Extend the inland trout season by two weeks; set bag limits for German brown and rainbow trout at five per day with a size limit of eight inches, and eliminate minimum size limits on most sport fish in the northwest area of Wisconsin.

Earth Week slated April 9-15

WASHINGTON — Earth Week 1973 will be observed from April 9-15, Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., said this week.

The man who founded and organized Earth Day 1970 and the subsequent two Earth Week observance said he plans to introduce legislation in the 93rd Congress to designate the second week in April as Earth Week.

Nelson, in calling for the issuance of an Earth Week 1973 proclamation by the President, the governors of the states and his fellow congressmen, said, "We are ev lving a new ethic. No longer do we consider ourselves separate from the environment or above it. We realize that we are part of it, that we and nature are interdependent and that whatever affects the environment sooner or later affects man."

In the environmental area, he said, the lawmakers are the caretakers of the Earth's resources.

Helen McNaughton Spencer, 81, widow of M. Lyle Spencer, a former Lawrence University professor, died of a heart attack Jan. 1, at Arlington Heights, Ill. Mrs. Spencer had been injured in a fall before her death.

Mrs. Spencer was from one of the Fox Cities pioneer families. Her father, Alexander McNaughton, settled in Kaukauna during the 1870s and founded one of the first pulp and paper firms on the Fox River.

Spencer was on the university English department faculty from 1911 to 1920 and later became president of the University of Washington, Seattle. He later was in charge of the Syracuse University school of journalism, Syracuse and Utica, N.Y.

The couple had resided at Clearwater, Fla., before Spencer died five years ago. Survivors are a daughter and two sons. Mrs. Spencer has been buried beside her husband in Syracuse.

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Surgery only answer for 'dropped bladder'

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have never read in your column about a dropped bladder. I am past 65 and lifting, etc., caused my bladder to drop down into the vagina. It is very uncomfortable.

This happened five months ago and I was wondering if it goes on unattended what the results will be. Does it ever repair itself without surgery? I do some exercises for it which the doctor gave me, but it still drops. I would like to hear from you before I resort to surgery. — Mrs. T. M.

This condition is called cystocele. I'm rather surprised you haven't read prior comments about it. It is a rather common problem in women.

It is involved with a loss of strength in the tissues which normally support the bladder, so gravity lets it descend where it doesn't belong. (Strain of childbirth earlier in life often has a bearing on development of the trouble later.) I doubt that lifting had anything to do with it.

Exercises may help a little but the condition is not one that can ever repair itself. The answer is surgery — which, I gather, your doctor has recommended, but you want somebody else to say the same thing. Well, I do. Surgical repair is not a serious undertaking, but it is something that needs to be done.

If you don't have it attended to, the discomfort will go on, and there is the possibility of developing inflammation of the bladder and very possibly other urinary tract infections.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like to know the difference between high and low blood pressure. Are the symptoms the same? If not, what is the difference. — E. A.

Blood pressure is simply the amount of force or pressure which pushes blood through your arteries. When we are young and our arteries are supple, the blood flows easily, and pressure is moderate. As arteries harden, it takes more pressure, and high blood pressure develops. (There are other factors involved in this, too.)

The symptoms of high or low blood pressure are distinctly different, but I hesitate to attempt an explanation in the space available here. Why don't you send for my booklet, "Controlling Your Blood Pressure"? You can get it by mail. Send 25 cents and a long, self addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent. You'll find both high and low blood pressure explained, not to mention normal pressure.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard that the correct way to shave the legs is with a downward stroke. I have been using an upward stroke because it seems easier. Would this affect hair growth? — L. W.

Direction makes no difference, with the possible exception that if a person is subject to ingrown hairs, one direction or the other may be preferable. Direction of shaving, as well as shaving itself, has no effect on hair growth.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 15 and a diabetic. I was told by some people that:

— Female diabetics have premature babies. If true, I would like to know why. — S. A.

First statement wrong. Not true.

Second: not true of all. Female diabetics, it is true, do not handle pregnancy as well as nondiabetics. Premature births and stillbriths are frequent but with good medical supervision many births are normal.

One theory about the troubles in pregnancy is that the disease causes premature "aging" of the placenta. That is, blood vessel changes occur that cause the placenta to be less efficient toward the end of the pregnancy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is "elevated uric acid level in the blood" and how can it be treated? — A.L.

It means there's more uric acid in the blood than there should be. Uricosuric agents (drugs which reduce uric acid) are the principal treatment. Diet is of secondary importance.

Elevated uric acid is the basic characteristic of gout and of some types of kidney stones, so it is important to control uric acid. Ninety per cent of those with a uric acid level above 9 m.g. eventually develop gout.

If for either reason you need to reduce your uric acid, I refer you to my booklet, "Gout: The modern Way to Stop It." For copy, send 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to me in care of The Post-Crescent. Your doctor will have to choose the medication; the booklet will tell you what to do about diet.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What about these artificial sweeteners? Why should they be used only "by people who have to restrict their intake of ordinary sweets?" — Mrs. S.A.A.

The pure food laws require such a statement on items containing artificial sweeteners because, after all, sugar is a food. The artificial sweeteners do not provide any nourishment.

The phraseology does not, of course, specify why a person "has to restrict intake of sweets." That leaves it open for those who restrict sweets in order to lose weight.

Consumer contact

New Congress' schedule dotted by buying problems

BY ARTHUR E. ROUSE

WASHINGTON — Consumer issues have gained an unusually high place on the list of activities planned in the new Congress.

In the past, such matters have received more attention during the second year rather than the first year of each Congress. But that pattern may change this time if preliminary indications are accurate.

Perhaps the main reason for the extra interest in consumer issues is the large number of them left simmering because of bitter, losing battles last year.

At the top of the list is the so-called Consumer Protection Agency measure. Consumer advocates fought Administration and industry forces for several years, then saw a filibuster kill the most promising proposal near the end of the last session.

The main dispute is over the degree of power which should be given to the planned agency. Proponents want broad authority to intervene in the actions of other agencies. They feel so-called public agencies all too often wind up in the arms of special interests.

Opponents of a strong agency contend that there are already enough government branches protecting consumers. They say the proposed bill would hamstring, rather than help, federal action in behalf of the public.

In view of the attention already given to this issue and the new complexion of Congress, chances of the stronger measure passing Congress are considered better than ever before.

Prospects also have improved for passage of a federal no-fault auto insurance law. A much debated bill to that effect was shelved near the end of the last session by only three votes in the Senate. If Ralph Nader finally decides to push such a measure, approval is certain.

The outspoken consumer advocate refused to support the bill despite a solid front among other consumer leaders. Critics suggested that his refusal was linked to the efforts of the Center for Auto Safety, a group he helped form, to get a $10,000 grant from the American Trial Lawyers Association, the principal group fighting the no-fault concept. Nader calls such a suggestion untrue. A change in the bill may win over Nader.

Another major item is the bill to require warranties to be written in clearer language. The same bill sought to strengthen the powers of the Federal Trade Commission so the agency can act faster in stopping deceptive practices.

The Senate passed the measure, but it died in a House pigeon hole, mainly because of industry opposition to the FTC section. If the sections are split apart into two bills, as key legislators propose to do, the warranty proposal is expected to breeze through Congress.

Another bill likely to get much attention is the Credit Billing Act. This measure is designed to prohibit interest charges on monthly bill items already paid and require creditors to correct billing errors promptly. A bill with these proposals stripped away passed the Senate but not the House.

Public hearings will draw attention to health care problems, "truth" in advertising proposals and a sweeping measure by Senator Philip Hart, D-Mich., to break up the largest industries into smaller, more competitive units.

As in the past, however, the final result will depend greatly on "grassroots" sentiment: The way Congressmen read their mail from home.

Family affair

Families raised their voices Saturday in celebration of the Epiphany. Mrs. Don Genge clasps her son, Ricky, and friend Tom Marx joins in.

Joyful feast

Mrs. Laury LeVally makes a joyful noise Saturday evening as area families gathered for All Saints' Twelfth Night Celebration. A silent partner, Tom Buhl, was on hand for the feast of the Epiphany of Christ. At right, male members of the church did their part in making the annual event a success. Doug Aziz and Ernie LaBrake sliced up the beef in the church kitchen while guests sipped hot cider as they warmed their chilly bones.

Classified ads offer counselling on pregnancy

Two 24-hour a day pregnancy counseling "hot lines" are now available to Fox Valley area residents. Information on both is presented daily in the classified ad section of The Post-Crescent as a public service of the newspaper.

One ad reads: "Legal Abortion Available. For information call 733-2754 or 739-0247. Wisconsin Committee to Legalize Abortion."

The second ad reads: "Pregnant? Need help? For further information call 1-800-362-8028 toll free. All calls confidential."

Both services are designed to assist persons seeking information and assistance regarding problems incurred through pregnancy, and both stress confidentiality.

Both have access to local counsellors who have backgrounds in obstetrics, psychiatry, nursing and other health and social service related professions.

There is no charge for the information service.

Elegance scaled down for smaller dwellings

CHICAGO — A new collection of living room furniture with a country English flavor has been inspired by the numbers of people who are planning their homes for the utmost in comfort and relaxation. Called Richmond Hill, it is being introduced by KayLun Inc. and Hickory Mfg. Co., as a group of coordinated seating and occasional designs. Its rugged oak simplicity and identifying style motifs reach back to the early 17th century.

In planning the collection, the two firms have based their styling on seating that looks like the comforting refuge it really is and on occasional designs scaled and styled for today's homes and apartments. The remarkable thing about this group is that it is also coordinated in spirit. It all comes together readily in numerous ways. The room decor in which Richmond Hill pieces are used can go rustic and countrified or sophisticated and suburban. In this day of the "mix," it does just that with modern, Early American and even with a judicious dash of early attic.

The many possible variations may be seen in the settings and color schemes designed by Duke Piner, AID, now being shown at the International Home Furnishing Market in Chicago. These range from rich dark jewel tones of the 17th century's oriental carpets and crewel embroidery to the powdery pastel shades which are livening up interiors today.

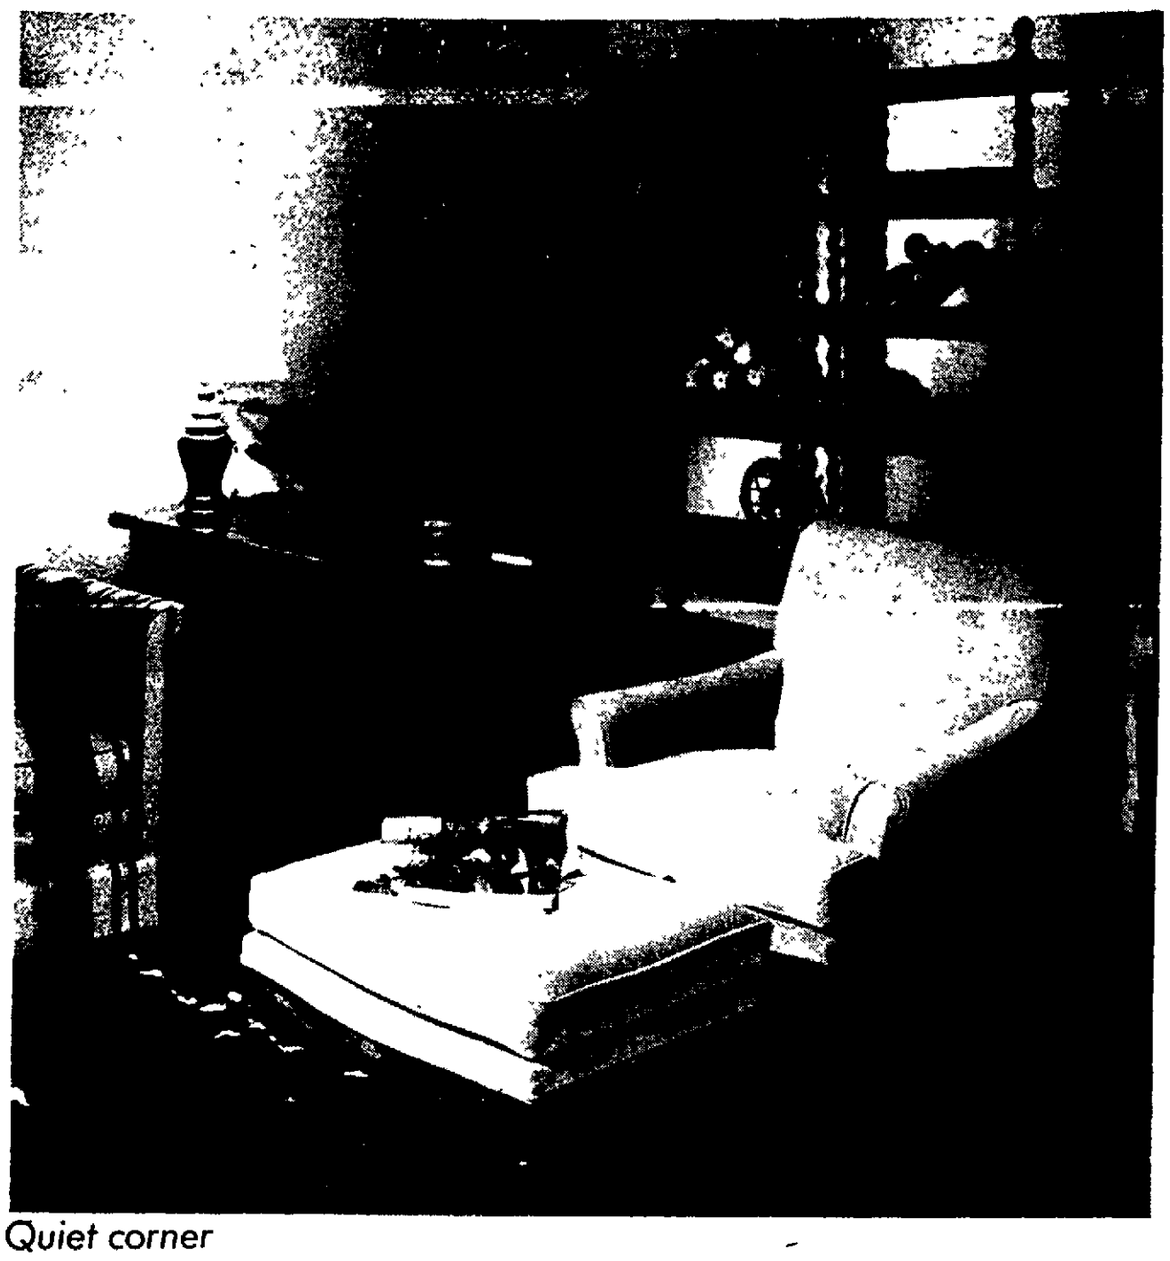
The extensive group of tables and other occasional designs feature the twisted rope motif — a 17th century favorite all over Europe — as a kind of signature which is especially effective on the vertical corner post of a six-shelf etagere. A more unusual 17th century motif appears in the form of the deer hoof foot on the legs of the table desk, dining table and matching chairs. Simple baroque curves and crossed stretchers appearing on the base of the round cocktail table are echoed on a wing chair stretcher base and on other seating pieces — an exceptional illustration of the coordination of detail throughout the entire group.

There are many loveseats — especially suited to small dwellings and a 40-inch round game or dining table with the hoof feet and inlaid oak parquet panels. The unit expands with one or two leaves.

Decorative etageres can be used alone or stacked in pairs or against a wall or as a room divider. For small rooms, the sofa table or console with its twisted rope legs can help divide a room for varying activities.

Table that grows

For all those people who have limited space for formal dining comes this 40-inch round table which adapts itself to all sorts of compact spaces. A modern mechanism concealed underneath the divided top makes it easy to extend the table by means of one or two leaves to 58 or 76 inches as needed. Notice the hoof motif of the table legs and the front chair legs.



Quiet corner

A corner for relaxing includes a downy cushioned lounge chair with matching ottoman from the same collection, a desk and an etagere. The same hoof-footed legs and the twisted rope turnings are used on the occasional pieces.

Cranberries abundant

Total production of cranberries is forecast at more than 2 million barrels. Large inventories of frozen and processed cranberries are on hand, and canned cranberry sauce will be in abundant supply in January.

Rice production, estimated at 85.1 million hundredweight, will be the largest crop in three years. In January this relatively economical carbohydrate food will be in ample supply.

The 1972 dry bean crop is expected to be about 13 per cent greater than last year's. Pinto beans and pea beans in particular, which are among the least expensive sources of high protein, will be plentiful in January.

Housewives cook-up excuses

I once made out a list of reasons for not cleaning the oven and came up with 3,872 excuses.

That sounds pretty impressive, but I know women who have come up with a lot more. In a survey recently conducted to find out what job around the house women detested the most, oven cleaning was at the top of the list. (Cleaning under the freezer was No. 2 and waxing the garbage was No. 3.)

Men do not understand women's aversion to the chore. They point out self-cleaning ovens (only cats are self-cleaning) and new products on the market to do the job for you. (I could get busted for possession, let alone inhaling some of it.)

Their attitude is one of the reasons why it is so hard to convince brides that if the Good Lord had meant for us to scrub ovens, he'd have given us arms eight feet long.

We have a policy in our neighborhood of taking newlyweds in tow and educating them. Last week, we paid a visit to Mildred who had been married only two weeks and already had her head in the wall. "Look, Mildred," I explained patiently. "If you can't soak it, spray it with lemon, drop a tablet, damp mop or plant a daisy in it, forget it. It doesn't deserve to be cleaned."

"But my mother-in-law said . . ."

We looked at each other. This girl needed a crash course in survival.

"But if you don't clean your ovens," she simpered, "how do you bake in them?"

We all snapped to attention, put our hand over our heart, and said, "As the great patron saint of dirt, Phyllis Diller, once said, 'One cupcake at a time.' "

"Look at it this way," said Marcia. "I stand in front of an oven which the boys have just stuffed with a pizza dripping mozzarella, which two hours before housed a berry pie that bubbled all over, which the day before baked a roast in a bag that exploded and corroded the sides, and I say to myself, 'Is this the kind of life I want for my daughter, Rosalie?' "

"What are some excuses you use?" asked Mildred timidly.

"My light is so corroded, I can't see to clean it," said Mayva.

"The aluminum foil I put in to protect the bottom is stuck permanently to the unit," volunteered Maxine.

At that moment, my child came running in with the news that he had just put some french fries in my oven and the oven caught fire.

I smiled, "That brings my list to 3,873."

Ann Landers

Homosexual asks for tolerance

Dear Ann Landers: Are you brave enough to print this? We will see. Recently I read where two men were legally married in Texas. What I don't understand is why they had to resort to trickery to get married. Why are homosexual relationships considered illegal? Why is it considered a sex crime when there is no victim, such as rape or child-molesting? Why do some police departments hire men to tempt the homosexual and then arrest him for being a pervert? It seems to me this is much more dishonorable, much baser conduct than loving someone of the same sex.

Why must people like me sneak around behind the backs of parents and relatives so that we don't shame or "disgrace" them? Why can't I hold hands with my lover in public and dance with him the way heterosexual lovers do? Surely love is not indecent, to be scorned and despised. The world needs less hate and more love — any kind of love. I do not understand why so many people do not understand. Can you explain it?—One

Dear One: You read wrong about the "legal" marriage. In no state in the union can members of the same sex marry. This goes for Texas as well as the other 49.

I agree that police entrapment is a rotten device and I am against it. I also agree that most victimless crimes should be taken off the books. In Illinois, as well as many other states, (Illinois was first) homosexuality between consenting adults is not considered illegal.

Why can't members of the same sex kiss publicly and dance together and proclaim their love as heterosexual lovers do? Because homosexuality is unnatural. It is, in spite of what some psychiatrists say, a sickness — a dysfunction. In our culture, in the year 1973, we are not conditioned to accept homosexuality as the normal human condition.

For 18 years I have been pleading for compassion and understanding and equal rights for homosexuals, and I will continue to do so. But I do not believe homosexual activity is normal behavior and unfortunately most people have a tendency to equate any and all abnormalities with sin, disgrace and shame.

Dear Ann Landers: I was amused by Wini's letter and your reply applauding the deemphasizing of wardrobe by the college girl.

Those "few pairs of jeans" with "patches from Maw's scrap bag" are just as much a status symbol as our cashmere sweaters were back in the 40s. And for your information, Ann, today's patches are not meant to cover up holes. They are purely ornamental and can be purchased right along with the new jeans.

Don't get me wrong. I am not opposed to fads. Every generation has them. What I am against is fuzzy thinking and downright nonsense, such as the adult who attributes this generation's anti-materialistic approach to "a better sense of values." Anyone who thinks today's mod clothes are cheap hasn't priced them. As the grandmother of two teen-age girls I know what I'm talking about. Think it over, will you?—Thank Heavens for Good Credit

Dear T.H. for G.C.: I'm thinking. I'm thinking. And I must say, you have a point. In fact, you have several points. I've come to believe that the anti-materialistic attitude of many teenagers is an expression of rebellion against affluent parents who tried to substitute "things" for time and attention.

Declarer must protect against holdup of suit

"There was no way for me to know who had the ace of spades," South said defensively. "That's perfecly true," his partner admitted. "They were too smart for us." And North sighed as he rolled his eyes up toward the ceiling.

West opened the six of spades, and East played the — what do you think?

The routine play is the ace of spades, which wins. East continues with the queen of spades, and South holds up — that is, he refuses to take his king. East next leads his low spade, and South takes the king.

South now goes after the clubs, and East must take the ace of clubs. East cannot lead another spade, much as he would like to do so. Whatever East does lead, South can win nine tricks: four clubs, one spade, three diamonds and one heart.

Now let's get back to the first trick and see what East really did play. East played the queen of spades!

This couldn't lose anything if West had the king of spades, for then the queen would win the trick. As it happened, South had the king, and he felt he had to win the first trick. If South refused the first trick, it might turn out that West had the ace and jack of spades, and then South wouldn't win a spade trick at all.

This was just what East wanted — to force South to win the first spade trick instead of holding up. Declarer went after the clubs, and East took the ace. Now he could cash the ace of spades and return his low spade, allowing West to defeat the contract with the rest of the long spade suit.

Pregnant girls find child care in curriculum

By COURTENAY CANNADY
Associated Press Writer

BALTIMORE (AP) — With math, science and social studies, the required courses at Edgar Allen Poe High School include prenatal health and child care.

All of the school's students are pregnant.

"Being pregnant is a traumatic experience for many girls, and they need to be away from their peers to regroup their forces," explains Poe's principal, Vivian Washington.

The 520 pregnant teen-agers enrolled at the 7-year-old public school also are keeping up with students in other high schools and preparing for jobs and motherhood.

"The girls have strong feelings about themselves, that maybe they're not good persons," said Mrs. Washington, but "we say, 'All right, ... what are you going to do about the future?'

"You're going to be a parent, responsible for another life. But first you must be responsible for yourself.'"

While at Poe, the girls also must be enrolled in health clinics and social-service programs. Nutritionists and doctors pay regular calls to supplement the care.

The curriculum is designed to ease the teen-agers' return to their former high schools or find jobs after delivery. They may transfer to their former schools six weeks after a post-delivery medical checkup.

The dropout rate is low, according to teachers, because attendance is not compulsory. "It's much more satisfying, because they want to be here," says business education teacher Ruth Wilmore, one of 22 faculty members.

Mrs. Washington describes Poe as a kind of crisis center where pregnant teen-agers can count on support from their classmates and teachers in an informal atmosphere.

Along with a brisk student turnover, one of the toughest problems is "puncturing the unreality" which accompanies many expectant mothers to Poe, said Lois White, a job placement staffer.

When they arrive, most students do not grasp what is required in having, and caring for, babies, Mrs. White added.

"What is needed," said Mrs. Washington, "is to bring home what being the head of a family means — the responsibility as well as the sex and pregnancy."

Teen-ager's interest in environment

Do you want to get your teen-ager moving? Would you like him or her to become interested, involved, and busy? Do you complain that he's always hanging around, wasting time, not caring about anything that matters?

Young people are looking for causes, and there are plenty of causes looking for them. You may disapprove of some, but you could not disagree with the "ecology" movement, especially if you feel that things aren't what they used to or might be. The ecology movement is not just a fad. If it is, it may well be the last fad of the century. It has the support of President Nixon, of the Boy and Girl Scouts and of schools and churches. Everyone may not always agree on all the details, but there is clear agreement that it's a move in the right direction.

You can awaken your teen-ager from his or her lethargy by subscribing to "Environmental Action" ($7.50 per year; 24 issues. Room 731, 1346 Connecticut Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036). Surprise your son or daughter. Subscribe in his or her name. This publication tells what's happening and where in the ecology movement.

One recent issue tells about what is happening to foods and why. Your child, instead of getting his lunch out of the candy machine in school, may begin to eat real foods again. According to a survey conducted by Boys' Life Magazine, the Boy Scout publication, 8 per cent of its readers drink eight or more bottles of soda pop per day. That's enough bubbles to blow anyone's mind or stomach. How many bottles does your youngster consume per day? When the U.S. Agricultural Department wanted to have soda vending machines removed from a school lunchroom in Montgomery County, Md., the school authorities objected. They admitted that the kids weren't drinking any milk. But they feared that with the removal of the vending machines students would leave school at lunch time to fill up on junk foods elsewhere.

A lot of young people are mouthing ecology cliches while violating what this movement stands for in their daily lives at home and in school. So pin your teen-ager down. Insist that he be informed and that he know what he is talking about, instead of spouting off empty phrases. Teach and help him or her live up to the ideals they express. Get them going, thinking and doing. That's what teen-age is supposed to be about.

The ecology movement is not the only good cause that might engage and interest your teen-ager. There are many others. Which one he or she chooses is immaterial, as long as it leads to desirable social and personal ends, and as long as it's not just a "keep busy" project.

Does your teen- or college-age son or daughter want to work, travel or study in the U.S. or abroad this year or next? Would you like to help him or her get the right information or a scholarship? Arnold Arnold has prepared a booklet especially for readers of this column. It lists the best and most reliable books, and private and government sources of information in the U.S. and abroad. Send 20 cents and a large (No. 10), stamped, self-addressed envelope to Arnold Arnold, Dept. C, in care of this newspaper.

Women enrich lives through college courses

OSHKOSH — "The dishes are done, the house cleaned, the pies baked, the children in school. What can I do with this extra time on my hands?"

To this woman's plaint, David Weidemann, University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh director of admissions, has an answer.

"Go to school," he suggests.

"We have many housewives on our campus during the day taking one or two courses, not that they are seeking a degree — though some of them are — but for the enrichment of their lives.

"They may be interested in learning more about art or music or Wisconsin history or government or about flowers and rocks and books and plays."

Weidemann pointed out that if they have been out of high school for 10 or more years, they do not have to file a high school transcript with his office. If their high school graduation is less than 10 years ago, a transcript is required.

These housewife-students do not have to take a test either, such as the ACT test, to be admitted.

They may pick up an admissions blank either at his office or at their local high school which they should fill out and bring to his office.

Registration for classes is Wednesday and Thursday, according to an alphabetical schedule. Fee payment also will be on those two days at the Kolf Physical Education and Sports Center.

Fees are $16.75 per credit. Those students taking five or more credits will pay an additional university fee of $40. Some classes may have special fees to take care of certain supplies and costs, such as in physical education, art and music, the admissions director added.

Weidemann pointed out that during the fall semester UW-O had 750 married women enrolled in the daytime program, some as full-time students working toward a degree and some as part-time students seeking enrichment of their lives.

Allen Philipsen

'He gave his life'

MADISON — A 22-year-old Kimberly man who died in a fire here Monday morning died a hero, according to workers in a care center for the elderly.

Allen Philipsen, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Philipsen, 438 S. Washington St., Kimberly, who was a graduate student at the University of Wisconsin, died of smoke inhalation in the blaze at the Allen Hall Residential Care Center near the UW campus.

Rolland Peterson, 60, Madison, a resident of the private facility, also died from smoke inhalation, while eight others were injured, two of them critically.

"He gave his life for the people in this building," Mrs. Marcia Verhoeven, director of the center, said of Philipsen, who lived in the building and worked as a part-time switchboard operator.

Philipsen reportedly ran to the fourth floor of the 10-story building to investigate reports that smoke was coming from a room.

"From what we've been able to piece together, Allen took an extinguisher with him. When he saw there was a fire he phoned back to the desk," Mrs. Verhoeven said.

"He then went into the room, managed to turn over the burning mattress, discharge the extinguisher and pull the resident out of the room." Firemen believed the mattress was ignited by a burning cigarette.

Mrs. Verhoeven said Philipsen could have left the building from an exit across the hall from the room, but according to reports from some of the nearly 80 senior citizens in the facility, he stayed to help them evacuate.

The residents were taken to a nearby university dormitory, while firemen contained the blaze to the fourth floor. Damage was estimated at $55,000.

The nursing home, formerly a private dormitory and office building, had been rated by the state as fire resistant. State officials said the reinforced concrete structure did not require a sprinkler system, and that the enclosed stairwells helped keep the flames from spreading to the other floors.

Philipsen was a 1972 graduate in physiology and had been a member of the UW varsity rowing team.

He was a 1968 graduate of Kimberly High School, where he served as president of the senior class and president of the student council. He was a 1967 representative of Badger Boys' State, a 1967 nominee of the Wisconsin Michigan Power Co. to the National Youth Conference on the Atom in Chicago, and was the 1968 recipient of the Bausche and Lomb honorary science award at Kimberly High School.

He is survived by his parents; two sisters, Mrs. Tony Van Krey and Mrs. Richard Meyer, both of Kimberly, and two brothers, Kenneth, of Chadron, Neb., and Clement, also of Kimberly.

Funeral services are pending at the Jansen Funeral Home, Kimberly. A funeral mass will be celebrated by the victim's uncle, Father Martin Philipsen, at Holy Name Catholic Church, Kimberly, with burial in the parish cemetery. The family said a memorial will be established.

Xavier Junior High under study

BY MALIA PENIKIS
Post-Crescent staff writer

The feasibility of establishing a central Catnolic junior high school in Appleton to bring the educational program in line with the city's public school system will be studied by a special committee of the Appleton Area Board of Catholic Education.

The committee, which will be headed by Ralph Whitehead, was set up loosely Monday at the area board meeting after a lengthy discussion of the enrollments in grades 5-8 in the Catholic elementary schools.

The idea of the 6-3-3 system for the Catholic schools is not new. It had been discussed on occasion in the past, when Xavier High School was operating over capacity. At that time there was some thought of building a new facility to house grades 7-9, alleviating the overcrowded conditions at Xavier by removing the ninth grade.

The thinking now, however, is that with the decline in Xavier enrollment, which has gone from about 1,300 to 550 in the past seven years, a central junior high school could be housed at the Catholic high.

"It could be a solution to some of the problems for all of us," one of the priests at the area board meeting said.

It would make full use of Xavier, centralize the educational process for that level, eliminate fragmentation on the elementary level and make the educational shift from one level to the next more fluid, the priest said.

One of the main reasons for the decline in enrollment in the last three grades in the Catholic elementary schools in Appleton was the fact that parents wanted their children to take courses which would make the transition into high school a fluid one.

That was indicated on a study made by Whitehead's committee, which he distributed to the board Monday.

It indicated that some courses, such as languages, physical education, industrial arts, home economics and music, either were missing or offered on a limited basis in the elementary schools.

In many cases, the board agreed, the problem was that individual schools could not afford specialized teachers, but probably would be able to do so in a centralized junior high school.

The idea of a central junior high is made even more attractive because of the fear that, due to financial problems, some of the parishes may consider closing some of the grades, and so force even more pupils to attend public schools.

To date, St. Therese is the only one of the seven parishes with day schools which no longer has grades 7 and 8, but others already have thought about it.

"There is no question that if the schools don't have the last two grades, Xavier suffers as well. Once you lose the pupils to the public junior high school, they more than likely will continue their course of study at the public high school," one of the board members said.

There are facts to bear this out and Whitehead's committee had made a study in recent weeks to determine the enrollment statistics in the past few years, and find out the reasons for the decreases.

The survey, taken at six Catholic elementary schools in the city, shows that since 1968, there has been a 28.6 per

Judge will ask county to pay Roemer's salary

BY BILL KNUTSON
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County Judge Urban P. Van Susteren was expected to ask the county board this afternoon for $11,000 to cover the salary of his choice for marriage counselor.

At the request of Supv. Herman Ripp of Appleton, the board set a special order of business for this afternoon to consider Van Susteren's surprise appointment Monday of former Appleton Mayor Robert Roemer to the new counselor post.

Van Susteren said Monday that Roemer was to start work this morning, but the judge has since said he will wait to see what action the board takes before determining if he will seek formal approval of his appointment.

County Welfare Director James E. Stampp told The Post-Crescent that he will disregard Van Susteren's appointment and will continue his search for a marriage counselor that meets state qualifications.

Stampp said he had recommended the counselor have a master's degree in social work. Roemer graduated from Lawrence College in 1933 with a bachelor of philosophy degree with majors in sociology and economics. He said he worked for the county welfare department, as a caseworker, for two years.

Plans were to offset the conselor's salary with state and federal reimbursements of 86 percent. There would be reimbursement only if the counselor is hired through the Outagamie County Department of Social Services.

Van Susteren said today he has learned that Roemer does not possess all of the rigid qualifications set down by the state for the welfare department position. So he will ask that the county either foot the $11,000 salary or seek other sources of reimbursement. He said he is considering the possibility of Roemer's hiring under the federal government's Emergency Employment Act (EEA). Several other county employees have been hired with EEA funds.

County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt said he doesn't know where the county money would come from to pay Roemer.

Supv. Eugene Kloes of Appleton questioned whether the county board should concern itself with the Roemer controversy. DeLaHunt ruled that it should be taken up "for the good of total county government" and because hiring a counselor apparently is contin gent on the availability of outside funding.

Besides, DeLaHunt told supervisors, if the board does not act, Roemer's authority as marriage counselor could be challenged in the future.

The November board resolution authorizing the hiring of a marriage counselor and cutting the family court commissioner's job back to half-time did not specify who will name the counselor.

Van Susteren said he was assured by County Executive Alvin E. Woehler that he has the appointive authority since he hears most of the county's divorce cases.

County Judge R. Thomas Cane and Circuit Judge Gordon Myse don't think Van Susteren has the authority tc name who he wants to the counselor job.

And if the appointment was in the hands of a judge, all four of the judges should have a voice, Cane said. Under a new Family Court and judicial workload shift that went into effect Jan. 1, Cane was assigned to handle all family-related court matters for the next two years.

But Van Susteren said that under terms of the workload shift, he will

Geenen out of court race

Appleton City Atty. David Geenen today withdrew from the campaign for election as judge of Outagamie County Court Branch 3.

He explained that while he has long been interested in seeking the judgeship as "a logical progression of my professional career," he primarily was interested in the post before Branch 3 was reorganized as a family court effective Jan. 1.

"The change of jurisdiction to a family court has taken away my desire for the office to the extent that I am no longer willing to expose my family to all of the burdens involved in a vigorous and expensive campaign," Geenen explained.

Geenen said he is withdrawing now to allow time for another candidate or candidates to enter the race by the Jan. 30 deadline for filing nomination papers.

The city attorney announced his candidacy on Dec. 22 saying he always had been interested in seeking a judgeship and was "particularly interested in juveniles," over whom the court will have jurisdiction, among other family matters.

Today he said, "I do not know if there are any advantages to be gained by the creation of a family court, but the idea of trying one on an experimental basis appears to have some acceptance. While I am still tremendously interested in juveniles, I do not feel the remaining jurisdiction warrants my candidacy." The court previously had handled juvenile, small claims and civil damage cases.

Finance plan 'suicidal,' St. Therese tells Xavier

A financial support plan for Xavier High School, which had been tentatively adopted by seven parishes in Appleton, has been rejected as "financially disastrous" by one parish — St Therese.

In a strongly worded letter sent to the Rev. John Mullarkey, Xavier coordinator, the parish council questioned the very need for Xavier High School while the financial plan was termed unrealistic and suicidal.

The letter, read to St. Therese parishioners Sunday, said that the "availability of good quality public schools in our community makes one wonder about the valid duplications of educational facilities in exclusive religious schools."

The plan, which was devised earlier in the school year by a committee of laymen from each parish, Mullarkey and a member of the Xavier board, is known as the Harrisburg Plan.

Under the plan, each parish would pay a certain amount according to three factors: Net income of the parish (general income minus 10 per cent of the debt); number of parishioners, and the location (accessibility) of the parish in regard to Xavier High.

The plan was to be implemented next fiscal year, beginning July 1. A variation on the plan is used in other centralized Catholic high schools in the diocese, according to Mullarkey.

In the St. Therese letter, the parish officials state that "in our opinion, the plan revealed some glaring unanswered questions and unrealistic proposals.

"Our council voted unanimously Nov. 14 to reject any plan and proposes to adhere to the present means of financial support for Xavier."

The present plan of support is $125 toward the cost of the tuition for each child from the parish attending Xavier.

The debt retirement is separate with each parish paying a certain percentage. The Harrisburg idea would group the operational and capital expenditures along with the debt retirement.

"The plan was conceived with the hope of using the money more for education rather than debt retirement," according to Mullarkey, who also stated in an interview that the final figure for each parish would be about the same in the long run.

The letter to Mullarkey from St. Therese was signed by Richard Radloff, president of the parish council; Ron Conrad, parish treasurer; and the Rev. J. L. Bestler, pastor.

It contested Mullarkey's idea that the cost would even out. "We believe the proposed plan would bring financial disaster to St. Therese. Our committee and those whom they consulted feel that to support your proposal would be financial suicide for the parish," it read.

"You are not asking support of Xavier but you are asking us to pledge the income of the parish for a long period of years. To take 10 per cent of our income for 15 years to support an institution that has no immediate prospect of balancing its operating expenses and an even bleaker future for successful support is truly a folly," the letter charged.

Discussing a presentation of the plan which Mullarkey had presented to the parish officials, the letter also stated that "We are safe in saying that your salary predictions are low for the coming year deficits. The number of quality religious is decreasing and the yearly increase in their salaries can only make the deficit greater than anticipated."

"When public supported schools can offer more in curriculum for a wide variety of students, why spend energy and money on a small exclusive group of students who could benefit both themselves and others by using facilities of an enriched program?

"We cannot dismiss this grave dividing force within our parish," the letter stated.

However, a comment attached to the letter stated that "We believe there are some great values in being educated in a religious school. We have proved this idea by our fine new programs of personalized instruction. We will continue to improve the quality here with good teachers," it promised.

"But we must be realistic. A majority of our students must be cared for in a religious education program only. This demands more attention and greater expenditures than we gave it in the

Kaukauna lodges not exempt

The Kaukauna Elks and Moose lodges, along with Appleton Moose were among the latest 29 organizations to lose their tax exemption status due to racial discrimination, the Wisconsin Department of Revenue announced Monday.

Wayne Leonard, Kaukauna city assessor, said he received notification that the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, Lodge No. 962, had failed to file the required information during a revenue department evaluation of discriminatory practices.

He said he had received notification of the Elks exemption-status loss but not on the Loyal Order of Moose, Lodge No. 953. A revenue department spokesman said today both lodges were losing their exemptions and that letters were being sent to each lodge and separate letters for each lodge to the assessor.

The Elks own a building at 139 E. Second St. and have been taxed for years for the lower floor, which is rented to a retail outlet, and the land. But thesecond floor, including a private bar and meeting facilities, had been exempt.

Leonard said the second floor would be placed on the tax roll by May 1 and be billed to pay 1973 and 1972 taxes at the end of the year. He said the land and first floor had been assessed at a total value of $25,400. He estimated roughly the second floor would add another $5,000 in valuation, or about $125.

The Moose lodge hasn't had a facility for years, although it did build one several decades ago in downtown Kaukauna. A Moose spokesman said the lodge had purchased about 9.5 acres of land — all but about an acre in the city — on State 55 between Outagamie County Trunk 00 and U.S. 41 where it plans to build a clubhouse. The property, which cost about $18,000, had been exempt.

He said the organization had received no notification from the state on the loss of its exemption. He said the lodge had filled out and returned the department questionnaire and believed it was not racially discriminatory.

The lodge's request for annexation of the single acre from the Town of Vanden Broek into the city comes up for City Council consideration later this month.

Twelve lodges in northeastern Wisconsin, including the Moose Lodge near Clintonville and at Appleton, were among the 29 fraternal and other organizations in Wisconsin to be added to the list losing exemption status, the department of revenue said.

Lifting the exemption is the result of a November, 1971, U.S. Supreme Court decision stemming from a Wisconsin test case brought by Milwaukee attorney Orville Pitts, who brought suit against the Milwaukee Eagle's Club a few years ago.

The Clintonville area Moose lodge is located about two miles west of the city on U.S. 45 and apparently has membership coming primarily from the Clintonville and Marion areas.

Those other lodges losing their exempt status include Elks lodges in Baraboo, Beloit, Chippewa Falls, Eau Claire, Fond du Lac, La Crosse, Oconto, Oshkosh and Platteville; Moose lodges in Beloit, Chippewa Falls, Elkhorn, Fond du Lac, Green Bay Merrill, Menominee Falls, Milwaukee, Muscoda, Portage, Watertown, Waukesha and Wausau; and Improved Redmen Lodges in Elkhart Lake, Kiel and Superior.

The total number cited is 81.

K-C sends diapers to Nicaragua victims

NEENAH — Kimberly-Clark Corp. has donated 2,000 cases of disposable diapers and 300 cases of disposable towels to the Red Cross for use by earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

The products, which are valued at approximately $15,000, are being sent to Miami, where they will be loaded aboard ships bound for the Central American country.

Rental housing gets initial OK

Developers say they hope to start construction next spring on a long-controversial 29-acre rental housing development near Appleton-East High School, if the City Council concurs next week with plans commission endorsement granted Monday to the first phase of the project.

The commission placed two conditions on its approval of plans to build the first 14 townhouses containing 158 apartments in the planned 400-unit Apple Village Townhouses project, on a site lying north from Calumet Street and west from Schaefer Street.

Commissioners qualified their approval with the stipulation that the developers sign over an additional 7 feet of right-of-way to the city for future Calumet Street widening, to provide for an 80-foot roadway.

The commission also instructed the Milwaukee developers to comply with ordinance requirements to provide either land or cash for future park and school sites in proportion to the size of the development.

The project has undergone changes in both name and design, since first being proposed in 1969 along with the planned development zoning ordinance under which it is being undertaken.

Originally conceived as a luxury apartment complex of 424 units and named the Bluebird Project, it has been scaled down due to pressure by city officials to 400 units, while the developers switched to a townhouse concept after doing local rental market studies.

The total project cost had been es-

Students will see ABC film on own time

The Appleton Board of Education refused Monday night to accommodate a request that students be given the option to attend a movie during school hours, aimed at raising funds for the ABC program and that bus transportation also be provided to transport them to and from the movie.

The board upheld the rejection recommended by District Admin. Orlyn Zieman who expressed concern the youngsters were a "captive audience" and that school time would be used for a fund-raising program of an organization.

Zieman said a similar event had been approved during his absence a year ago but that parents had complained about the program, including some who didn't necessarily support it.

ABC stands for A Better Chance and is a privately-funded program for economically deprived but scholastically promising youngsters into schools to give them an education that will prepare them for college.

Mrs. Mary Ann Brackenridge, president "Sounder" of the Fox Valley Human Rights Council, said the movie, called "Sounder," about a black family, was an excellent film and that it would be presented at a reduced rate by the theater, with half the proceeds going to ABC.

Board members indicated they weren't against ABC but agreed with Zieman's contentions. John McKenzie, a board member, said he would encourage youngsters to see the movie during nonschool hours.

Mrs. Brackenridge was told there was no opposition to individual teachers arranging through their principals for their students to see the film, such as a field trip-type arrangement.

2 Outagamie Health Center wings to be converted for elderly patients

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Conversion of two mental wings of the Outagamie County Health Center to Golden Age Home use was approved by the county board this morning over the objections of several members of the Board of Social Services who felt their board should be involved in the conversion planning.

Conversion of the two wings was at the request of health center trustees and the board's agriculture, education and human resources committee because of the anticiapted reclassification of about 60 patients from mental patients to public medical institution patients.

Supv. John Kellogg, a member of the board of social services, argued that the social services department budget would be affected by up to $½ million by reclassification of the patients.

He proposed that the county board direct the trustees an social services board to work together and bring in a recommendation next month.

County Board Chairman Russell DeLaHunt ruled, however, that Kellogg's amendment was not germaine to the resolution and was upheld on a roll call vote.

A later motion by Supv. Charles Wussow to hold the resolution over until next month lost on a voice vote.

"If this resolution is adopted we (social services board) will have to come back for more people and more money," Kellogg warned. "This needs more discussion."

The changeover of 78 beds from mental hospital classification to Golden Age Home is the result of a federal court ruling that new hearings must be held for any mental patient involuntarily committed. Guidelines for condition of new commitments also were set.

Of the 128 patients at the hospital on involuntary commitments, Speener said he expects only about half to be recommitted as mental patients. A few will be released outright, but most will be reclassified to receive nursing home care.

Aids for those patients would then come through the social services department, rather than directly to the health center from the state.

Speener said the changeover would not involve any physical remodeling of the building, but would result in lower revenue from the health center and also result in a reduction of staff.

The actual rate the health center would receive from the social service department still must be negotiated, Speener said.

The two wings to be converted would be for patients classified as limited personal care, the lowest care classification. Speener said there was a criticial shortage of beds in that classification in the county, including private homes.

Kellogg argued that many of the questions could only be answered by the trustees and social services board working together since the social services department would become responsible for most of those patients.

Supv. George Schroeder, chairman of the agriculture, education and human resources committee, noted those patients still would have to go someplace even if the county board did nothing and that the social services department would still be responsible for paying the cost.

Judge gives teen-ager a chance

An Appleton teen-ager who said he became involved with drugs as "a form of rebellion against authority and society," was told in Outagamie County Juvenile Court Monday that he was a good candidate for Lincoln State School.

But Judge R. Thomas Cane, who said he had thought seriously of sending the boy to Lincoln, followed the recommendation of the county Department of Social Services and delayed disposition for 60 days.

It was further recommended that 10 months of supervision be imposed if, after 60 days, it is determined the 16-year-old boy has improved his school grades, continues to receive counseling and stays away from drugs.

Appleton police, on Nov. 11, found four bags of marijuana and 43 LSD tablets in the boy's pockets when they searched him in a downtown restaurant. The boy told Cane, during his first appearance last month, that he intended to sell the drugs.

He said, after pleading guilty, that he saw nothing wrong with selling drugs to people he knew. However, he told Cane Monday that he now believes it is wrong to sell drugs to anyone.

Wendtland is mayor's first assistant

The first administrative assistant to an Appleton mayor was named today with Mayor James Sutherland's appointment of David L. Wendtland, 28, regional planning director and acting executive director of East-Central Regional Planning Commission.

Wendtland will assume the $15,500 per year post Feb. 9, the mayor announced. Two-thirds of the salary is to be paid by an anticipated federal grant from the department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Sutherland pointed out in announcing Wendtland's appointment that the post of administrative assistant was recommended to be created in 1968, by the Citizens Government Operations Study Committee.

The mayor included funds for creation of the post in his executive budget for this year and won council approval. The job is filled solely at the discretion of the mayor without confirmation of the appointee required by the council, as is necessary in other top city appointive positions.

Sutherland listed three work areas in which he said Wendlandt's experience will be valuable and which he said the city needs to stress more:

Planning, acquiring federal aids and keeping touch for the city with federal, state and local governments and regional planning agencies.

"Mistakes or lack of aggressiveness in any of these areas cost money — big money — and local taxpayers are the ones who usually end up stuck with the bill," said Sutherland.

He said Wendtland's familiarity with local conditions, problems and needs is a "special bonus."

The basic objective of the assistant is "to make the mayor more effective," said Sutherland.

He has said in the past that he has been swamped with major business since taking office and needs an assistant in part to relieve him of some of the routine daily chores that interfere with more far-reaching decisions and actions.

Two bound over on charges of burglary

CHILTON — Two Milwaukee men were ordered bound over to Circuit Court Monday to stand trial on charges of burglary and theft. They both appeared before Calumet County Judge D. H. Sebora, at a preliminary hearing.

William W. Becklund, 22, and Ronald E. Schwensau, 32, are charged with burglary and theft at the Calumet Bottle Gas Co. in Hilbert on Dec. 30, 1972. The two men were picked up by Appleton police on the basis of an all-points bulletin describing the car. Taken in the robbery were several guns, television sets, camera, money and stock certificates owned by Gary Schomburg, owner of the store.

In testimony at the hearing, Leon Ruhland, route 1, Hilbert, said he noticed a car parked in front of the bottle gas company when he dropped off a friend between 2:30 and 3 a.m. Dec. 30. He said he got out of his car and walked to the rear of the parked car when a man stepped out of the broken door, pointed what appeared to be a gun at him and told him, "You didn't see a thing."

Ruhland testified that he left and when he turned around at the end of the street, the car had left. He said he then notified Schomburg, who gave the car's description to Calumet County officers.

At the hearing, Ruhland identified the man he saw at the scene as Becklund.

Thomas Witzak of the Appleton Police Department testified that he noticed the car on W. College Avenue, followed it for a few blocks and radioed for another squad car before stopping the vehicle.

He said Becklund was driving. Witzak said he saw the sawed-off shotguns on the floor of the car and also part of a television set under a blanket in the back seat.

Witzak testified that while he was talking to the two men, Schwensau reached down on the floor and touched one of the guns. The police officer said he then pulled his revolver and ordered the pair to put their hands where they could be seen. The back-up squad then arrived and the two men were asked to get out of their car and were searched. They then were taken to the Appleton police station.

Witzak said the car was impounded and items taken from it were tagged and placed in security. He identified the items that were offered into evidence Monday.

The defense counsel tried to establish that the officer searched the car without a warrant and that it was searched where the car was stopped. Witzak testified that he only seized the two sawed-off shotguns, which were loaded.

It was established that the defendants signed documents telling them of their rights and giving consent to enter the vehicle.

Schomburg testified that the items taken in evidence belonged to him.

The defense counsel moved to have the case dismissed, claiming that no chain of evidence was shown regarding the alleged crime. A motion also was made to have the evidence supressed due to illegal search and seizure. Both motions were denied by Sebora.

Motions to supress the evidence before the hearing also were denied by Sebora as was a motion to get the $7,000 bond reduced. The judge said a Department of Social Services report on the two defendants did not warrant reduction of the bail.

No date has been set for the trial and bond will continue.

Police & fire beat

Two persons were reported in good condition today at St. Elizabeth Hospital after they were injured in a one-car accident about 5:45 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 41, one-half mile north of Meade Street in the Town of Grand Chute.

The driver, David A. Danz, 18, Green Bay, suffered multiple cuts and abrasions and possible fractured ribs, while a passenger, Dale I. Busse, 18, route 2, Luxemburg, sustained a partly severed ear.

Outagamie County police said the car was traveling north on U.S. 41 when it struck the median and rolled over.

NEW LONDON — Two persons were advised to consult physicians after they were injured when their truck went out of control and entered a ditch along State 54, one-half mile west of Lower Road in the Town of Liberty about 7 p.m. Friday.

The driver, Harold E. Muskevitch, 28, 702 Algoma St., New London, suffered cuts to a forehead, nose and mouth, while a passenger, Paul E. Steingraber, 27, 300 Avon St., New London, received a bruised forehead and cut nose.

Outagamie County police said the truck apparently was forced off the road by an unidentified vehicle traveling east on State 54. After entering the ditch, the vehicle struck an irrigation pump.

Southeast is plagued by freezing rain, ice

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Freezing rain and icy conditions plagued the Southeast today, closing highways, toppling trees and snapping power lines and leaving thousands without heat in below-freezing temperatures.

Bitter cold remained entrenched over many sections of the nation. A new Pacific storm scattered snow from Northern California and Oregon into Nevada.

Snow flurries touched the Texas Panhandle and the central Midwest and Great Lakes Region.

The collapse of a snow-covered furniture store roof in Jacksonville, N.C., killed one person. Two elderly sisters in Red Oak, Ga., an Atlanta suburb, died in a fire triggered when an ice-loaded tree limb fell on their home.

Slick roads contributed to two traffic deaths in North Carolina. Interstate 85 in north Georgia was closed. Heavy snowfall in Tennessee and North Carolina mountain areas halted all business and travel, and ice buildups in north Georgia and southeastern Tennessee caused power failures.

The possibility of flash floods loomed for later in the week when warmer temperatures are expected to melt snow and ice accumulations.

Georgia Power Co. crews got extra help from workers in south Georgia and Alabama as they tried to overcome outages in the Atlanta area, Augusta, Athens, Rome and other northern areas. About 30 per cent of Atlanta's power customers were without electricity.

Numerous schools were closed in Arkansas because of snow and ice, and 4,000 customers of the Arkansas Power & Light Co. were without electricity in the state's southern section as ice-laden utility lines snapped or were broken by falling trees.

Elsewhere, heavy-snow warnings were posted for the central mountains of Arizona and travel advisories were issued for Utah. Gale warnings flew from the central coast of California to Washington.

Japan denies entry to Rolling Stones leader Mick Jagger

TOKYO (AP) — Rock musician Mick Jagger has been denied a visa by the Justice Ministry to lead his Rolling Stones in a series of five concerts scheduled to start here Jan. 28.

The ministry said today its denial was based on a past conviction of the British musician on a drug charge. It said it had no objections to a Japanese visit by the other 19 persons in Jagger's group.

The music office said it will decide on Wednesday whether to go ahead with the concerts without Jagger. All 60,000 tickets for the five concerts have been sold.

While the Justice Ministry did not specify the drug conviction against Jagger, he was fined $480 in Britain in 1970 for possession of narcotics.

President trimming his staff

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, according to close associates, has cut the White House professional staff by about 14 per cent since announcing plans to reorganize and slim down the federal bureaucracy.

These sources said even more will go.

Nixon, who has presided over history's biggest expansion of the White House staff, told newsmen at Camp David, Md., last November that he expected to set an example for government efficiency by ordaining that the most sizable personnel cutbacks would come in the White House staff.

To date, according to White House figures, 23 White House professionals have been announced as returning to private life and 13 others have been announced as being in line for other positions within the bureaucracy.

It is on the basis of these figures that White House sources said there already has been a reduction of about 14 per cent in professional personnel.

No figures have been given on secretarial and clerical employes who may have left because their bosses were fired or sent to other agencies.

The White House figures apparently are based upon a budgeted personnel limited to 510 bodies—male or female—for the 1973 fiscal year that ends June 30. Recent Civil Service reports would indicate, however, that the White House obviously has topped its personnel ceiling and may indeed be employing more than 600 persons—plus an undisclosed number borrowed from such agencies as the Defense and State departments and the Central Intelligence Agency.

Although none of the bigname White House factotums— such as H.R. Haldeman, John D. Ehrlichman, Henry A. Kissinger and Ronald L. Ziegler, who may even take on additional duties—is supposed to be leaving any time soon, there has been an apparently studied departure of lesser lights.

For example, special assistant Mark I. Goode, a professional in the field of television image-making, is returning to private life.

Also departing, for California politics, is counselor Robert H. Finch.

And Army Brig. Gen. Robert L. Shultz, special assistant in charge of keeping Nixon in touch with former presidents, is being retired. Apparently Nixon has found a way to maintain liaison with former President Lyndon B. Johnson—the only surviving member of the presidential club—without the services of a general.

McGovern now sees mistakes

WASHINGTON (AP) — If he could do it over again, Sen. George McGovern says, his presidential campaign would be different: less travel, more television, less openness with the press, and more "no comments."

"My confidence in the ability to get to people with appeals based on simple, old-fashioned virtues like trust and decency has been shattered," said the Democratic party's 1972 presidential nominee, who was overwhelmed by President Nixon in last November's election.

As he eased back into the congressional routine—and geared up for his 1974 senatorial re-election campaign—the South Dakota senator reflected in an interview on what he would do differently.

"I'd conduct a cooler campaign," McGovern said. "Campaigning in three or four cities a day is a thing of the past. I don't think anyone will ever run for president that way again."

McGovern added: "I had thought that, as an underdog, it would impress people with my determination and sincerity. But it didn't work that way."

His advice for anyone contemplating a presidential campaign: Do less traveling and depend more on television— "fireside chats"—to carry your message to the voters.

"Looking back on my travel schedule, I don't know how I did it. And I did it for two years," McGovern said, adding, "And Nixon never left the White House

"I wouldn't be as open with the press," McGovern said. "I'd be more discreet, more cautious about baring my soul. There would be more 'no comments'."

McGovern says the press did a poor job of covering the campaign.

"I don't think the American people got a true picture," he said. "That was partly my fault and partly the fault of the press. I don't have harsh feelings for the press. I think they do a good job generally. But we had an unusual situation this time and neither I nor the press handled it quite right."

The senator particularly resents what he considers the news media's gullibility in falling for the Nixon campaign's strategy of using "surrogate candidates."

Day after day, McGovern said, various spokesmen for the Nixon administration were given equal play with the Democratic presidential nominee while Nixon was able to ride out the campaign without ever having to respond to McGovern's charges.

Wholesale prices soar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale farm prices posted the biggest monthly increase in 26 years last month with a climb of 6.8 per cent, the government reported today.

The report, by the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics, blamed weather damage to crops as the main reason for the big increase.

The sharp climb in food prices boosted the government's over-all wholesale price index 1.8 per cent in December, the largest in 22 years. The increase was slightly less, 1.6 per cent, on a seasonally adjusted basis.

Prices of a broad range of industrial raw materials rose three-tenths of 1 per cent while wholesale consumer finished goods ready for market at retail had climbed 1.2 per cent, the report said.

The big increase in prices of farm products, largely uncontrolled by federal price regulations, included boosts of 21.1 per cent for grains, 16.9 per cent for eggs, 13.6 per cent for hay and oil seeds, 9.4 per cent for livestock, 7.8 per cent for plant and animal fibers, eighttenths of 1 per cent for poultry and one-tenth of 1 per cent for milk.

The only declines was 5.1 per cent for fruits and vegetables.

Grains were 44.1 per cent higher than a year ago, livestock was 22.4 per cent above last year and eggs were up 25.8 per cent over the year.

The rise in prices of farm products was the largest since March 1947 and the over-all rise in all wholesales prices was the biggest since January 1951, the bureau said.

He's short 5 bedrooms but calls quints miracle

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — James Baer says his house is "short five bedrooms" but he still calls the birth of quintuplets to his wife a "miracle and a blessing."

"I don't know what one baby costs, let alone five," Baer told newsmen Monday at Evanston Hospital, where the five-day-old quints were rushed shortly after their birth Friday in Highland Park Hospital.

The three girls and two boys born to his wife, Lynn, 26, were the Baers' first children.

The 30-year-old Northbrook stockbroker confirmed reports that his wife had taken fertility drugs and added, "If we had it to do over again, we would have repeated everything we've done. My wife and I wanted a family more than anything in the world and God knows we finally succeeded..."

The infants, ranging in weight from 1 pound, 11 ounces to 2 pounds, 14 ounces, are "beyond the most difficult period" said Dr. Thomas Gardner, the neonatology specialist caring for them.

Gardner guessed the infants would spend two months in Evanston Hospital, a referral center for premature and high risk babies.

He said all five children were receiving milk via nasal and gastric tubes and their color was good.

"Their chances for survival are quite good," he said.

Mrs. Baer was reported in excellent condition in Highland Park Hospital.

Baer said he has had one "commercial offer" involving the infants and that he has not had the time to think about the added financial responsibilities.

Recalling the moments during the birth of the quints, Baer said, "When I heard a doctor say, "My God, there's another one," I knew we had got more than the twins we had counted on."

Baer said he was seated on the floor in the fathers' waiting room when he learned the news of the fifth birth — "I just couldn't stand up any longer."

Sen. Sparkman expecting Congress to counteract freeze on housing

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Sen. John J. Sparkman says he is hopeful that Congress will negate the last 12 months of an 18-month freeze on subsidized housing starts ordered by President Nixon.

The freeze was announced Monday by Secretary George W. Romney of the Department of Housing and Urban Development as both he and Sparkman, an Alabama Democrat, spoke at the 29th convention of the National Association of Home Builders.

Romney said a temporary holding action on new commitments for water and sewer grants, open space grants and public facility loans also has been ordered.

"The time has come to pause, to re-evaluate and seek out better ways," Romney said.

He emphasized, however, that projects already in the "pipeline" and those necessary to meet statutory or other specific commitments will be approved.

But Sparkman, Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., and home building officials viewed the actions as abuse by the executive branch of its power to impound appropriated funds.

Sparkman, chairman of the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee, said the housing freeze will have a serious impact during the remainder of the current fiscal year.

"But I am hopeful Congress will have acted on legislation by then that will negate the last 12 months of the moratorium," Sparkman told newsmen prior to appearing on the same platform with Romney.

"I should think we could get legislation through pretty early. We passed a good housing bill in the Senate last year and I think we can use that as a basis. With full support of the public and the Congress, I believe we can present to the President a legislative package he would find impossible to turn down."

Patman, chairman of the House Banking and Currenty Committee, spoke before Romney's announcement, but he commented on rumors of an 18month moratorium on subsidized housing starts.

He said waste and corruption may be involved in some of the housing programs, but he added, "It is silly, and destructive, to think these ills can be cured by a meat-ax.

"Some of this meat-ax approach to cutting government spending is not fiscal responsibility, but fiscal irresponsibility of the highest order — fiscal irresponsibility which threatens the very future of the nation."

Stanley Waranch of Norfolk, Va., president of the home builders' association, commented, "Housing has been made the scapegoat of a confrontation between the executive branch and Congress."

Directors of the association earlier had approved a resolution saying the rumored moratorium would result in the loss of at least one million man years in jobs and more than $10 billion to the economy in 12 months.

Bombing report given

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon sends its top military strategist to Capitol Hill today to report to Congress on the massive December bombing of North Vietnam's industrial heartland.

Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, planned to testify at separate, closed sessions of the House Appropriations and Armed Services committees.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird told congressmen Monday that Moorer would provide "complete information" on the stepped-up bombing of targets around Hanoi and Haiphong, which ran from Dec. 18 to Dec. 30.

President Nixon ordered the bombing halted after the United States and North Vietnam agreed to resume the secret Paris peace talks. The talks between White House adviser Henry Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho resumed Monday.

Many congressmen have called for a complete report on the bombing and the status of the Paris negotiations when the decision was made to resume it. Moorer's report marks the first response to such calls.

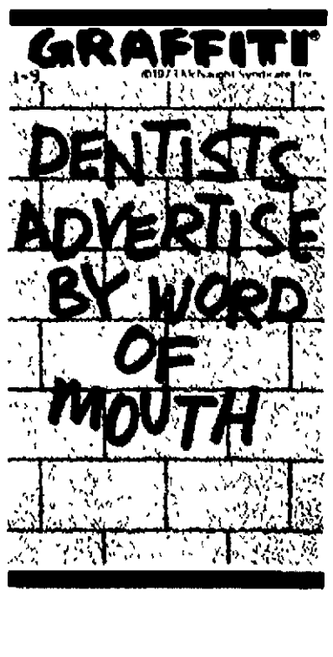
Laird fended off questions on the bombing at an open meeting of the Armed Services Committee Monday, saying he did not want to jeopardize the peace negotiations.

"Full information on the bombing effort will be released at the appropriate time," Laird told the committee. "Meanwhile we'll be glad to give it to you in executive session."

Laird said the President's May 8 order to mine North Vietnamese harbors and bomb military targets above the 20th Parallel was suspended from Oct. 23 to Dec. 18 "while serious negotiations were going forward."

"When it was determined negotiations were not going forward, the May 8 order was put back into effect," Laird said.

The outgoing secretary of defense said the Vietnamization program has been so successful that the South Vietnamese "can handle their own in-country, security."



Talks go on in Milwaukee

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Mediators and courts continued their efforts today to encourage a contract settlement for more than 10,000 public employes on strike against the city and Milwaukee County.

Strikers ignored a temporary restraining order which Circuit Court issued Saturday against the consolidated walkout involving several unions.

Judge John A. Decker scheduled a hearing today on requests by the city and the county for permanent injunctions. He had recessed the hearing Monday, urging state mediators to pursue contract talks.

County insurance rated well

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent staff writer

Outagamie County's insurance program is basically sound and the county appears to be getting its money's worth in insurance, according to an insurance counselor hired to analyze the coverage on county property.

Duane H. Bluemke, of U. S. Consulting Services, Inc., Milwaukee, also told the county board's finance committee Monday that he did not recommend frequent bidding of insurance coverage. "You can't buy insurance by the pound," he said.

The counseling service was retained to examine insurance coverage on county property after questions were raised by the county board over whether the coverage was adequate, whether the insurance should be bid more frequently and whether there was an advantage to becoming self-insured in some areas.

Bluemke examined the workmen's compensation, general liability and fire coverage, but told the committee his survey was not an in-depth study of the policies.

Such a detailed analysis, he said, would have required much more time, information and money.

Bluemke said the only valid way to reduce the cost of workmen's compensation insurance "is to reduce the losses." He said the county's present program is a good one, but suggested another rating method also be examined when the policy is renewed.

In the liability field, he suggested the county examine an umbrella-type policy for disaster protection and also look into professional liability coverage for sheriff's department personnel.

The present liability policy has bodily injury limits of $500,000/$1 million. Bluemke suggested lowering that policy and having an umbrella policy with at least a $2 million limit to protect the county in unusual catastrophes. This, he said, would provide higher coverage where needed for about the same price.

Professional liability for law enforcement personnel "is becoming more and more significant," he said, but noted the cost is high.

The county is getting fire insurance coverage at an "extremely low rate," Bluemke said, and questioned whether any money could be saved through self-insurance on any part of that coverage.

He said the only question he would have on the fire coverage was whether the amount of insurance was sufficient. He said he had noticed that the airport terminal was insured for only $17,000 and questioned whether that was a realistic value.

"Overall I think the agency has done a good job for the county," Bluemke said.

Supv. John Schreiter, who was one of those who had been critical of the way the county's handling of its insurance, said he was satisfied with the report, but was still unhappy because the finance committee no longer met with the insurance agent and no longer knew what was happening with the insurance.

Art Coffey, agent who has handled the county insurance, told Schreiter, "I have learned to stay away unless asked. Tell me who is responsible for insurance and who I should meet with."

Supv. Harold Miller, finance committee chairman, noted that his committee has responsibility for insurance.

Coffey suggested he met with the committee at least quarterly to discuss coverage and safety program recommendations.

Bluemke suggested that there should be a supervisor made responsible in each of the county departments to see to it that safety programs are carried out.

Bayorgeon quits indigent defense attorney position

Appleton lawyer James Bayorgeon, who has served since Sept. 1, 1971 as a part-time indigent defense attorney for Outagamie County, has announced his resignation from the position, effective immediately.

Bayorgeon, appointed as a charter counselor along with Appleton lawyer Patrick Mares, revealed his decision in a letter to County Judge Nick F. Schaefer.

Schaefer said Monday that James H. Morgan, who resigned recently as the county's second assistant district attorney, will take Bayorgeon's place.

In his letter, Bayorgeon said the Supreme Court decision of June, 1972, requiring the right of counsel in all cases where a jail sentence may be imposed "has increased the indigent case load far beyond any projections which could have been made when I first assumed this position in 1971."

Bayorgeon indicated that when he took the job, it was expected that each attorney would handle three cases per month.

Following the Supreme Court decision, Bayorgeon's case load increased to a point where he felt it would jeopardize his private practice.

Hortonville lawyer David Braithwaite was added as a third part-time indigent attorney last September, but Bayorgeon said this still didn't ease his indigency load to a suitable degree.

In mid-November, the county board decided to scrap the part-time, three man indigent defense system in favor of a two-attorney, full-time public defender office.

Morgan, 25, who has applied for one of the public defender positions, served from Aug. 14 to Jan. 1 as second assistant district attorney. He was a June graduate of the University of Wisconsin Law School.

The three indigent counselors were originally scheduled to be paid $500 per month with subsidies for other than ordinary expenses. Due to the heavy case loads, however, the fees for each were exceeding that figure.

Bayorgeon's intent previously had been to stay on until the public defender system takes effect, probably during February. One of the defenders will be paid $15,000 per year and the other $12,000.

Candidates for school board in Little Chute must file intent letters

LITTLE CHUTE — Persons interested in seeking the one seat on the board of education to be filled in the April 3 election must file a written declaration of intent with School Clerk Miss Helen Keohn by 5 p.m. Jan. 23 in order to have their names placed on the ballot.

Copies of the letters of declaration are available from the administrative offices at the high school. Letters of intent may be mailed to the administrative offices and will be picked up by the school clerk. The term of Richard Kilsdonk will expire this year.

Kilsdonk ran for a one-year term last spring to fill into the term of Dr. Edward Ebben, who moved from the district.

Although elected in April, the successful candidate will not assume official duties until the annual meeting in July.

St. Therese hits Xavier plan . . .

past. We must begin some equality in our educational activities."

The letter was first read a month ago at the Xavier board meeting. At that time it seemed to surprise the board members, who had not expected the total opposition to the plan.

Representatives of six parishes were present for the meeting and on the whole favored the plan. The letter precipitated a discussion of the next step, since the plan had taken into consideration participation by all parishes.

Because of the letter, it was suggested that the debt, which was due soon, be left as it is and be continued on the old percentage for the time being.

However, the board authorized Mullarkey to consult with the bishop and the Rev. Mark Schommer, superintendent of diocesan schools, to determine what could be done.

Mullarkey met with Schommer Monday but the only decision was to wait for the return of the Most Rev. Aloysius Wycislo, bishop, who is currently out of town, to return and conduct a meeting of those involved.

At the time the letter was first sent to Mullarkey, the board did not know the full objections of St. Therese to the plan.

In the comment to the parishioners in the Sunday letter, additional explanations were given.

Among the unanswered questions of the plan, the St. Therese officials apparently felt, were improvements in enrollments, projected deficits and equalized subsidy from each parish.

It was pointed out also that advice was sought from experts in the banking, real estate, investment and planning and budget fields and all seemed to agree that the facts given were too uncertain for a long commitment of spending parish money.

"Because money is able to be borrowed does not justify a loan," it was stated.

Development . . .

timated at $6 million in the early stages. The developer is now declining to make a cost estimate except to state each living unit should cost about $10,000. Other development costs include roadway construction and site improvements, landscaping and construction of recreation facilities including a swimming pool and recreation building in the first phase.

Each two-story townhouse structure will contain either 16 or 24 apartments of one or two bedrooms each. The buildings will be chiefly frame construction, supplemented with brick. Each unit will have a small private courtyard. The first phase would occupy the area from Calumet Street halfway north to Bluebird Lane. The project area also contains land north of Bluebird.

Under the planned development ordinance, the commission and council must approve all details of both site layout, building construction and design before the developers may receive building permits.

Ald. Glenn Thompson (13th), representative of single-family homeowners surrounding the tract, had grudging praise for the plans. While he said he believes the neighbors still object to having apartments so near their homes, Thompson said the city has done its best to assure a well-designed project and to protect the neighboring single-family neighborhoods.

He cited early action that produced a 90-foot wide buffer strip along the west edge of the site, running its full north-south length, and also praised the inclusion of the recreation facilities within the tract, a feature he said has been needed but lacking in other large apartment developments.

He also said he was pleased that the developers are presenting their plans in stages to the commission and council, so performance on the first stage can be evaluated when second-stage plans come in.

The city ordinance requiring developers to pay cash or set aside land for park and school use poses a legal problem. The ordinance sets a formula based on the number of residential lots in a development. But under the planned development ordenance no lots are created, allowing developers more flexibility in land use and layout but eliminating the basis for determining how much land or cash is required for schools and parks.

Charles Burnidge, Elgin, Ill., architect for the developers, told the commission something can be worked out. He suggested either about $9,000 in cash or a dedication of the buffer strip for park use. But Burnidge and commissioners were skeptical about the desirability of allowing public access to the buffer strip.

Ald. Beverly Wieckert (11th) said she thought the public school administration should be asked whether the strip might be useful for high school nature studies, but other commissioners shrugged off the suggestion.

In 1968 there were 1,584 Appleton pupils in grades 5-8 in the Catholic schools. This year there are 1,140, a decline of 44. The tragic part, according to the study, is that the second largest decline is in the fifth grade, which constitutes the hope of the Catholic schools for the future.

A total of 15 reasons for the decline were indicated by the educators who answered Whitehead's questionnaire. The one most frequently cited was the fact that the public school is closer to home, which prompted some board members to ask whether a central junior high school at Xavier would attract the youths. It was suggested that the study investigate the transportation angle, including the cost.

Another big reason for the drop in enrollment was the lack of instruction in certain courses, which was the big plus for the investigation of the central junior high.

The third big reason, which goes along with the instruction, was the transition of course in the public schools.

Sporadic check marks were put behind such statements as lack of social functions, too much discipline, change in the parents' attitudes on the importance of religious education, lack of facilities and pressure from the students themselves who wanted to be with their friends in the public schools.

The one glaring item was the absence of any checkmarks behind the statement: Tuition is too expensive.

wind up hearing most of the divorce cases for the next year. Therefore, he argues, he should decide who will be the marriage counselor.

Cane said he told Roemer he would abide by whatever decision the county board makes. He said he has a high regard for Roemer.

Myse said he does not want to get into a public debate with Van Susteren over the Roemer appointment. But he insisted that Van Susteren is wrong and he believes he is "just trying to get headlines."

Myse and Van Susteren are candidates for circuit judge in the April election.

Myse said it is possible the Roemer controversy could end up in Circuit Court if it cannot be resolved at the county level.

Van Susteren has no love for social workers in general. He has said so publicly many times. That's part of the reason he opposed hiring a marriage counselor for the Family Court. But he sees Roemer as more of an investigator, intermediary and aide to the court than a marriage counselor. He said Roemer has the ideal attitude, temperament and maturity for the job. The post doesn't require the expertise of a social worker, he contended.

One of Roemer's first duties would be to help set up a more effective method of collecting family support money from estranged fathers who are not paying, Van Susteren said.

Police & Fire beat

Diane L. Strand, 20, 1213 N. Summit St., was taken by private ambulance to St. Elizabeth Hospital after she suffered a cut nose in a two-car accident at the intersection of Bennett and Summer Streets about 3:15 p.m. Monday.

Police said she was a passenger in a car driven by Francis G. Mertens, 54, route 1, Appleton, which was headed south on Bennett Street. The other car, driven by Thomas H. Daily, 19, 125 N. Bennett St., was moving west on Summer Street.

Firemen were called to the Allis-Chalmers Aggregate & Coal Equipment Division, 401 E. South Island St., about 3:30 p.m. Monday, after sparks from a sander apparently ignited dust in an exterior vent stack, causing minor damage.

Firemen were summoned to the rear of the Walgreen Drug Store, 210 W. College Ave., about 7:30 p.m. Monday, after several cardboard boxes were reported burning. The fire was out when they arrived.

Wisconsin has been kindly sister

MADISON, (AP) — Wisconsin is approaching its 10 anniversary of an assigned marriage to Nicaragua, but without any sign that the union has not been compatible.

The Badger State has responded with cash donations, food shipments and volunteer workers to help the Central American nation survive the hardship of an earthqauke that devastated the city of Managua two days before Christmas.

Wisconsin's role as a "sister state" began late in 1963 under auspices of a facet of President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress.

The international friendship program later became the Partners of the Alliance, and now is called Partners of the Americas.

Wisconsin, accepting a State Department invitation to participate, was assigned Nicaragua.

LeRoy E. Luberg of the University of Wisconsin, secretary of the Wisconsin committee that oversees the Nicaragua relationship, said there are about 40 states participating in the international project.

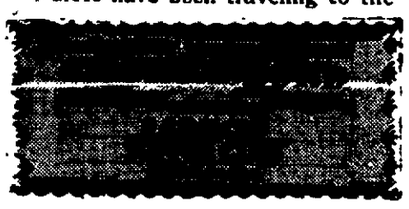
Luberg said Wisconsin has sent about 10 tons of medical supplies to Nicaragua in the last four years with the help of the Wisconsin Hospitals Association.

The variety of assistance is reflected in the boats which Wisconsin provided for Nicaraguan firefighters who were having trouble reaching isolated river communities.

The university has taken a special role in the program, particularly in an exchange program between Nicaragua and UW's Medical School. Dr. Henry Peters and Dr. Ned Wallace, both of the UW school, have gone to Managua as a result of the current crisis.

The State Medical Society said Saturday it had 150 medical volunteers, but that none had yet gone to Nicaragua.

Nurses have been traveling to the Latin American country for about a year to provide training and direct medical assistance.



Fort Atkinson has been host to teenage students from Nicaragua. Wausau similarly sponsored Nicaraguan attendance at UW's Wausau campus.

UW has provided Nicaraguans with farm information and seeds.

Wisconsin acted swiftly in 1971 when a spring hurricane and floods smashed portions of the small country.

The state sent items ranging from food to aluminum boats. Nicaragua expressed its appreciation by awarding medals to Wisconsin's governor and his staff.

Citizens have donated approximately $100,000 to help the state purchase food and equipment.

The Nicaraguan government estimated during the weekend that the country's existing reserve of beans and potatoes could last only two more weeks.

It estimated it had a three-month supply of corn, and perhaps even more of rice.

Wisconsin representatives said one of the biggest problems facing the country is construction of new housing ahead of the May rains.

Police & fire beat

LITTLE CHUTE — Debora Burns, 16, 325 Park St., a passenger in a car driven by Timothy Hietpas, 18, 714 Depot St., suffered a head bump when the auto was involved in an accident on Outagamie County Trunk N near the high school about 7:50 a.m. Friday.

According to police, Hietpas was traveling south on N when he slid on ice on a curve and collided with a car driven north on N by Francis Heiting, 44, 917 Charles St.

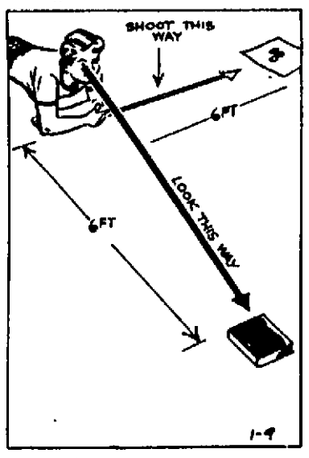
Directions for playing "Right Angle Mibs"

BY CAPPY DICK

"Right Angle Mibs" is a fun game for indoors.

You will need half of a newspaper page to serve as a target, three marbles



No side glancing

(different colors, such as red, green and blue) and as many shooter marbles as there are players.

Place the three colored marbles on the piece of newspaper as in the adjoining picture. Also place a book at the point indicated in the picture. The players shoot from a position six feet away from the target and six feet from the book. The rule is that in shooting, the player must keep his eyes on the book and shoot the marble at right angles. If he is caught side-glancing at the marbles he loses his turn.

If the player shoots the red marble off the paper he gets 25 points; 15 for the blue and 10 points for the green. The first player to earn a total of 250 points wins the game.

Any marbles shot off the target must be replaced for each player's turn.

Starr leaves Packers

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Bart Starr, the veteran Green Bay Packer quarterback who retired before the start of the 1972 season and became an assisant coach, announced today that he had decided on a career in business instead of football.

Starr said that although his official association with the Packers has ended, he would continue to assist Coach Dan Devine "for the next few weeks."

Starr, whose name had been mentioned in speculation about several head coaching jobs, owns automobile agencies in Alabama, but he did not outline his future plans specifically in a statement prepared for a news conference.

Starr confirmed that he had received "several head coaching offers recently," which he described as flattering. In his statement, he did not identify the teams which approached him, but said "one of the offers was particularly exciting."

"It would have given me a chance to associate with one of the truly great orgnizations in this league and to work for a sensational owner," Starr said.

"If I were to pursue a coaching career, I would have done so there," Starr said. "Visiting with the gentleman confirmed all the respect and admiration I had for him and made my decision even tougher."

Bart Starr

"I did not turn his offer down," Starr added. "I simply decided to pursue a career in the business world rather than football."

Starr said his work with the Packers this season helped him discover "how much football I really do know," and added, "I am confident I could take a group of 47 men and field a winning team quickly."

Starr, 39, set a National Football League record with a 57.4 pass completion percentage in his 16-year playing career at Green Bay, during which he guided the Packers to six divisional titles and five league championships, as well as two Super Bowl victories.

Working from the sidelines this past season, the second at Green Bay for Coach Devine, Starr helped direct a Packer resurgence. Green Bay, which slumped to a 4-8-2 record in 1971, posted a 10-4 mark and won the Central Division title in the National Conference. The Packers lost to Washington 16-3 in the first round of the playoffs.

NFL player strike seen in offing

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "Unless there is a dramatic change in the attitude of the owners," National Football League players will stage a strike to start the 1973 season, a spokesman for the players says.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the National Football League Players Association, made the statement after a meeting here Monday between 24 team representatives to discuss grievances.

Garvey said team owners have refused to deal with the association and any issues of substance. He said five major issues are at stake.

He said they are the use of artificial turf, player fines, expansion into Canada, a different form of government and the option rule.

The players said they are concerned about injuries on artificial surfaces and added that following a National Labor Relations Board ruling that the use of artificial turf is a negotiable issue, talks are to begin with the owners next week.

Garvey said, in regard to player fines, that they are arbitrary and that owners refuse to negotiate.

In regard to the Canadian League, Garvey said, "The players feel that the league is essentially capable of destroying the Canadian League. The Canadian League is the last vestige of competition for players." He said without the Canadian League, players would have nowhere to go and salaries would drop.

Garvey also said the players want a say in the rule-making process of the NFL.

Regarding the option clause, Garvey said players want the freedom to play out their options with one team and become free to play for another. At present, Commissioner Pete Rozelle has ruled that the club a man leaves must be compensated by the club the man joins.

The strike looms as a Strong possibility, Garvey said, because "we haven't seen any evidence of" a change in the owners' attitude.

The players will hold a convention here next June 3-7 to discuss priorities in bargaining when the current contract expires in January 1974.

The five-day preliminary meeting here involves player reps from all NFL teams except the two participating in the Super Bowl in Los Angeles—Miami and Washington.

Illini top Badgers

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Coach John Powless had accurately predicted his sagging Wisconsin basketball squad was going to have trouble with Illinois' Nick Weatherspoon and center Nick Conner.

Weatherspoon scored 24 points and Conner added 16 Monday night as the Illini overcame the Badgers 76-74 in a see-saw Big Ten game.

Conner sank six of seven field shots in the second half, four of them hook shots, to give Illinois the boost it needed.

Weatherspoon and Conner led an eight-point spurt which eradicated Wisconsin's 56-53 lead. Conner scored six points in the surge, two of them hookers.

Sophomore Otho Tucker, who also had 16 points, scored the bucket that put Illinois ahead 41-39 at halftime. The Badgers had led 29-22.

"We did a good job on everybody in the second half except Conner," Powless said. "I didn't think he would do that well with his hook shot."

Illini coach Harv Schmidt said, Conner's hook has always been on tap. It simply needed a team which would allow it a target.

"He wants to jump shoot all the time," Schmidt said. "We want him to hook. In the second half, he started hooking and got it down. He really played."

Conner said his hook was a response to the Badger defense.

"I didn't get the ball low in the first half," he said. "But when they started going to me low in the second half, I figured I had better take advantage of it. So I started hooking."

When Wisconsin tied the game for a 10th time, Tucker's three-point play made it 64-61 with 6:12 remaining, and Illinois never again trailed.

The hosts used a stall to hold off the visitors in the final two minutes at 72-71.

A basic element of Wisconsin's downfall was poor shooting in general. The Badgers, 0-2 in the Big Ten and 5-5 over-all, converted only 37 per cent of their shots from the field. Illinois hit 47 per cent.

Conner and Weatherspoon, both 6-foot-6, recovered 25 of Illinois' 53 rebounds. Wisconsin had 50, with 6-foot-11 Kim Hughes pulling 13 off the shelf.

Hughes and his twin brother, Kerry, scored 14 points each. Gary Anderson had 15 and Leon Howard 13.

"It is the best game Anderson has had for us," Powless said. "He took advantage of his quickness and size against Tucker."

Illinois is 1-1 in the Big Ten.

Minnesota, victims of Iowa last week, is host to Wisconsin Saturday.

Csonka irked at 'feud' stories

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Larry Csonka is fed up with people trying to create a feud between Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick, his running partners in the Miami Dolphins' backfield.

"They love each other, they pull for each other," says Csonka. "They just hate to ride the bench. To a real football player, the bench is hell. As far as I can determine, nobody enjoys hell."

That's one feud down, one to go.

Then there's the Bob Griese-Earl Morrall stickiness at quarterback. When the icy, confident Griese suffered a busted leg in the season's fifth game, the 38-year-old Morrall came to the Dolphins' rescue.

He led 11 victories in a row.

Now, with Griese healed, Bob is No. 1 again for Sunday's Super Bowl VII matchup against the Washington Redskins. Old Earl is one of those bench-hating types, too, but again the anger is professional instead of personal.

Don Shula is the man who decides who'll play and it ripped the iron-jawed Miami coach apart to assign Morrall to the sidelines.

"It was difficult because Earl is such a first-class person on and off the field," Shula said Monday. "We wouldn't be standing here, today, preparing for the Super Bowl, if it were not for Morrall. He picked us up in our darkest moment."

The darkest moment in a 16-0 season came when Griese was crumpled under a furious pass rush by San Diego Charger strongboys Deacon Jones and Ron East. Shula's heart was suddenly in his throat.

"Seeing Griese, the player of the year in the National Football League in 1971, laid out before you is a shocking thing," he said. "Then I turned to Earl for help. He responded, oh, how he responded."

Morrall quarterbacked for Shula when both were employed by the Baltimore Colts. It was Earl who was intercepted three times when Baltimore was upset by the New York Jets 16-7 in Super Bowl III.

"He's won a lot of games for me," Shula said as the Dolphins went through a pressphoto day Monday at Blair Field in Long Beach. "Matter of fact, my long memory is what caused Morrall to be retained when we cut our roster to 40 regulars last summer."

The Dolphins will work behind closed gates as the small baseball park today. It's the site where Washington's George Allen drilled the Rams when he was their head coach.

Pre-season win over Dolphs doesn't mean anything to Allen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The last time the Miami Dolphins lost a football game it was to Washington—but that doesn't mean a thing, psychologically or otherwise, says Redskin Coach George Allen.

"We used a lot of different people then and so did they," Allen said Monday of the Redskins' 27-24 preseason triumph against the Dolphins, who then proceeded to chalk up a perfect regular-season record followed by playoff victories against Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

"It's as if the California Angels beat, say, the Los Angeles Dodgers in an exhibition, then they wound up in the World Series. One has nothing to do with the other."

Mentioning the Angels wasn't just b chance. It's their home, Anaheim Stadium, where the Redskins are working out for their first National Football League championship game since 1945.

They attracted some 4,000 young fans to their hour-long practice, then had to run for cover when more than half the spectators, ignoring the slim security force, vaulted the ballpark fences and stormed onto the field, seeking autographs, pictures and handshakes.

"It was heartening," Allen said of the turnout, "but scary."

The Redskins coach also said he couldn't understand how Washington has been installed as a slim favorite to beat the Dolphins in Super Bowl VII on Sunday.

"They're 16-0 and they've got the No. 1 offense and No. 1 defense in the league," he said. "And they've got the three best running backs on any one team," Larry Csonka, Mercury Morris and Jim Kiick.

The 'Skins generally brushed aside the idea that Miami might have a psychological edge over them, having already been in a Super Bowl while it's new to Washington.

Kareem close to Archibald in scoring race

NEW YORK (AP) — Nate Archibald, the backcourt standout of the Kansas City-Omaha Kings, continues to lead the National Basketball Association in individual scoring but is receiving strong competition from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Archibald had 1,527 points after 46 games for a 33.2 points per game average while Abdul-Jabbar, seeking his third straight NBA scoring title, was at 30.8 according to NBA statistics released Monday.

Spencer Haywood of the Seattle SuperSonics was third with an average of 27.8 followed by Pete Maravich of Atlanta with 25.6 and Charlie Scott of Phoenix with 25.5.

FVL's Kaniess still optimistic; Tigers' Flora proves good prophet

BY ROGER PITT
and
DAN VANDERPAS

First round play will conclude in most conferences this week.

Standings in most conferences show the leaders with must win situations facing them as only a game separates the pacesetter from its closest challenger.

"We just start going and then run into Premontre, Pennings and Xavier," Fox Valley Lutheran's Gerhard Kaniess lamented Monday.

It has been a frustrating season for the Foxes whom sportswriters unanimously tabbed last in the Fox Valley Christian Conference in a pre-season poll. With a few points here and there the Foxes could be over .500 in the FVCC instead of 2-7.

The Foxes dropped three straight games by four points before routing Marinette, 71-51, Friday. And then along came Premontre to wind up the first half, 87-58.

Kaniess remains optimistic. "Only Dave Roehl is a senior on the 12-man squad and most of our close losses came on the road. We hope to win those close ones in our return games."

The lack of height hasn't seemed to hurt FVL that much. "Statistics show we have been rebounding pretty well, but the other team has an advantage in the fourth quarter," Kaniess said. "We're working for a much improved team.

"Jeff Young is our biggest boy (6-2) and he and John Schultz have been doing a good job rebounding. Young and Tom Grow have been scoring well for us, too," Kaniess said, when questioned about the one-two punch of Schultz and Dave Hanke. Schultz has 171 points and Hanke 152.

The FVL veteran sees Premontre and Pennings in a separate class and Xavier as the third outstanding squad in the FVCC. "All the rest are pretty even," he said.

The Bay Conference will finish out the first half of its season tonight with Pulaski, Oconto and De Pere having strong status as title contenders.

Pulaski (8p0) tackles Marinette (4-4) tonight, Clintonville (4-4) is at West De Pere (3-5) and Seymour (2-6) visits De Pere (6-2).

Oconto (7-1) invades Pulaski to open the second round Friday. Marinette visits Seymour and Bay Port (1-7) travels to Clintonville.

"I think we'll surprise a lot of people."

This observation was offered by first-year Wrightstown Coach Jim Flora before the season started, and so far, his prognostication has been accurate.

The Tigers boast a 7-3 record and have won three straight Olympian Conference tests, including a 49-48 upset victory over Valders.

"I checked over some old record books and the best mark I could find was 9-10 for the season about five years ago. To my knowledge, we haven't finished with a winning record during the last 20 sei sons," Flora said.

Wrightstown has a tall team as all starters stand over six feet. Tom Aerts (6-4), Wayne Brick (6-1) and Owen Somers (6-1½) provide the team with a well-balanced attack.

Amherst High School has had the fortune to have several good centers in its history, but that fortune figured to be at an end with the graduation of Paul Swetella last spring. Swetella (6-3) averaged 23.4 points in leading Amherst to a successful season and berth in the Class B sectionals. He followed his brother, Ray, into the middle for the Falcons.

But the void didn't last long as Rick Stoltz, a 6-2 senior, transferred from Stevens Point Senior High School. Stoltz, averaging 22.0 a game, set an Amherst school record last Friday with 44 points — including 20 of 30 from the floor. The 20 field goals is also a record.

Missouri shades SMU

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Missouri's victory over Southern Methodist couldn't have been any closer. It's also doubtful whether the narrow onepoint verdict could have evoked any more controversy.

John Brown pumped in a layup with no time showing on the clock as fifth-ranked Missouri edged SMU 74-73 in an intersectional college basketball game Monday night.

Umpire Pat Malette of the Big Eight Conference ruled the basket was legal despite an emphatic protest from the timekeeper that time had run out.

"I've been on the short end of this situation a few times," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart. "It's tough but it happens."

SMU Coach Bob Prewitt was less than philosophical.

"The official (Malette) already had made up his mind. He should have consulted the timer," the angry cage boss exclaimed.

"The clock never went off and that's what has to be official," said Mallette. "If the shot goes off and we can't hear the buzzer, then I will consult the timer-that is the only time. But if the clock never goes off, all I can do is assume there is time left."

Freshman Ira Terrell, who led SMU with 26 points, had put his team ahead 73-72 with three seconds left. Missouri then called time with two seconds remaining. Steve Blind then took a half-court pass and missed his attempt, but Brown, who scored 35 points, grabbed the rebound and scored the controversial bucket.

The timekeeper, Bill Durrett, said when the clock was reset after the time out the buzzer wasn't turned on.

In other games involving teams in the Associated Press Top Twenty, Florida upset No. 9 Vanderbilt 80-72, No. 13 Southwestern Louisiana defeated Cincinnati 94-88 and No. 18 Florida State crushed Georgetown 101-70.

Gene Shy, a 6-foot-5 forward, scored 24 points as underdog Florida took an early 8-6 lead they never relinquished. Vanderbilt was handcuffed as 7-4 Steve Turner collected three fouls in the first five minutes.

Dwight Lamar sparked a SW Louisiana rally by scoring six of his game-high 32 points in the final two minutes.

The Seminoles recorded their second highest scoring total of the season, romping to a 56-34 halftime bulge and placing all five starters in double figures.

David Vaughn scored 34 points and hauled down a school record 34 rebounds as Oral Roberts romped past Brandeis 123-95. Ruben Montanez registered 22 points as Duquesne whipped St. Bonaventure 84-60.

Michigan got a leg up on its rivals for the Big Ten basketball crown with a 71-59 victory Monday night over Iowa that moved the Wolverines into sole possession of the conference lead with a 2-0 mark.

In the only other Big Ten action Illinois held off Wisconsin 76-74, to up its conference mark to 1-1 while the Badgers are 0-2.

The Wolverines were led by sophomore Campy Russell's 17 points but the Michigan attack was sharply balanced by by Ken Brady, Joe Johnson and Henry Wilmore who added 16, 15 and 14 points, respectively.

Michigan opened up a six-point lead in the second half and went into a freeze with nine minutes to play against the visiting Hawkeyes.

Iowa, upset winner Saturday over defending champion and Big Ten favorite Minnesota, was unable to solve the sticky Wolverine defense and committed numerous fouls.

Michigan is 9-3 overall while the Hawkeyes slipped to 1-1 in conference play and 6-4 for the season.

Game of hockey not for sissies

NEW YORK (AP) —"Hockey," Gordie Howe once said, "is a man's game." Sissies, he might have added, need not apply.

There is an unwritten rule among hockey players that they shake off injuries and continue to perform. It is not unusual, for example, for a player to leave the ice to be stitched up and to return to action a few minutes later.

Germain Gagnon of the New York Islanders scored a goal in the final 30 seconds of a National Hockey League game against Philadelphia last month. He hasn't played since. The reason? When he scored that goal, he was playing on a broken ankle.

"Ed Van Impe slashed me in the ankle early in the period," said Gagnon. "I went to the bench when it happened and it didn't feel so good, but I skated the rest of my shifts."

Why?

A few nights after Gagnon got his, Gene Carr of the New York Rangers took a board check from St. Louis defenseman Bob Plager. The result was a cracked collarbone.

"I was in so much pain that I went to my knees a couple of times," said Carr. The young Ranger made his way to the bench where Emile Francis, general manager-coach of the club, was waiting.

"I think it's gone," said Carr.

"Sit on the bench awhile," replied the boss.

Carr was right. It will be another five weeks or so before he's back in uniform. "Then," the youngster said, "I'll be able to sit on the bench."

The Rangers, of course, have had their hands full with injuries this season. "But things are getting better," cracked Francis. Jimmy Neilson got hit twice on the ankle with shots and missed 26 games. Eddie Giacomin got hit in the head with one and got a shutout."

Goalie Giacomin went down like a man who had been shot in the third period of Sunday night's 3-0 shutout against Pittsburgh. Darryl Edestrand's shot had been deflected off a Ranger stick and cracked Giacomin over his right ear.

"I wasn't unconscious," said Giacomin, "but when you get hit like that, you really don't know if you're hurt."

Neilson, a rugged defenseman, knew he was hurt when he stopped a shot with his ankle in a preseason exhibition. After missing a fistful of early games, Neilson returned, stuck his foot in front of another shot and broke it again.

He is back again—and still blocking shots with his skates.

"It was easier to come back the second time," mused Neilson, his ankle soaking in a pan of ice water. "I guess I'm getting used to it."

Gari Tate jolts 278-661

Gari, who is 15 years old, had a blow in the first frame of the high game and then ran off a string of 10 strikes in a row before getting eight on his last ball.

Tate's performance overshadowed the likes of a 268 game and 619 series by Marty Schroeder as well as a 255 game by Roger Hyler. Roger finished with a 580 total.

For the Bantam Boys class, Scott Wettstein had a 188 game and Glenn Tellock rolled a 504 series.

Leading the Bantam Girls was Cindy Mauthe with a 490 series which included games of 174 and 172. Sheri Kolosso had 167-449, Cathy Mauthe 154-409, Pat Schmidt 405, Suzy Pomplum 117, and Laurie Pynch 151.

In the Junior Mixed League, Brian Reinke had a 180-507, Mike Yarnell 504, Doug Huss 180, Jeff Hodak 190 and Dan Berg 183. For the girls, Debbie Kolosso had a 234 game and 537 series.

4 curling couples win both Appleton playdowns

No chance for family jealousy existed at the Appleton Curling Club last weekend as four couples swept playoff honors in both men's and women's events. The skips were Mr. and Mrs. Neil Collins.

In the men's playdown for a berth in the state meet at Superior (Feb. 2-4), Neil skipped his unit past Ron Wallace in a best-of-3 set. Rounding out the winning rink — the current state champion — were Ed Lawrence John Boll and R. Charles Banker.

Meanwhile, Elaine Collins combined with Mrs. Banker, Mrs. Boll and Mrs. Lawrence to outlast four other rinks for the right to represent Appleton in the Feb. 13-17 United States Women's Curling Association bonspiel. The Appleton Curling Club will be host for the event.

Neil Collins turned in a "6-stone" score in the third and final game of his duel with Wallace. Rounding out the Wallace rink were Ken Spaay, Martin MacLeod and Paul Jack.

"I had opportunities. . .speaking engagements, television appearances," Athletics catcher Gene Tenace said during a recent interview at his trailer home in Southern Ohio.

He said he passed up one offer of $10,000 for an appearance in Las Vegas,

Gene Tenace

Nev., and didn't intend to let his World Series feats change him.

The mustachioed father of two girls belted four home runs to pace Oakland over the Cincinnati Reds four games to three. After a poor regular season, he drove in nine of Oakland's 16 World Series runs, including the first and last in the seventh game.

"I like being home with the family," he said while one daughter, Stacey, sat on his lap and the family's pet dog lay at his feet.

"You know, if you accept all those engagements you're away all the time and I'm away enough as it is with baseball," he said.

"The money, it was good, but I can sacrifice money for my family. Money just isn't that important to me. My main goal is happiness."

Although a newsman had been given instructions to look for "the last trailer on the right," about the only thing that would have given away location of Tenace's home would have been his 1973 auto. He won the car for being named Sport Magazine's most valuable player in the World Series.

But Tenace plans to trade in the car for a Jeep. Hunting is Tenace's hobby and he said he has always wanted a Jeep to get places where hunting is best.

"Besides, I have a chance to win another car" from another commercial group, he continued.

He also said the family intends to purchase a house in Oakland and move in sometime during spring training, but he explained that was something he and his wife had been thinking about doing for some time.

"The series gave me security," he said. "Before the series there was talk of trading either me or Dave Duncan. After the series, I figured I'd be staying a while."

Tenace, 26, batted only .225 in 1972 and went one-for-17 in the American League playoff series.

Tenace said he has spent much of the winter working on his father-in-law's Christmas tree farm, and hunting just about every day.

"I even went out New Year's day," he recalled. "Missed that first football game—of the day."

Tenace said one of the more meaningful events of the offseason was a "Gene Tenace night" in Lucasville. Cincinnati Reds television announcer Tom Hedrick presented him a plaque as part of the ceremonies.

"They're also naming the field I used to play on as a kid after me," he said "There'll be a monument in centerfield and they've been given an American flag from the Capitol building to fly there."

MU drops to fourth in poll

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rampaging UCLA, riding a 55-game victory streak, is the unanimous choice as the nation's No. 1 college basketball team in this week's Associated Press poll.

The mighty Bruins, 10-0, received all 47 first-place ballots and 940 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters who participate in the voting. Maryland, 90, garnered 767 points and maintained second place today in the poll covering games through Saturday. North Carolina State, 9-0, tallied 689 points, moving from fourth to third place and exchanging places with Marquette, 10-0 and 656 points.

Missouri, 11-0, moved from seventh to fifth place with 495 points while Long Beach State, 11-1 and 394 points, dropped from fifth to sixth. North Carolina, 12-1, was seventh, followed by Minnesota, 9-1, Vanderbilt, 11-1, and Houston 10-2.

Gehring, Clement top 700 in Classic League

It may have been cold outside, but things were hot in the Sabre Lanes Classic League Monday night as Keith Gehring and Roland Clement each recorded national honor counts.

Keith pounded a 730, and Roland had a 707 in their first three of 4-game series.

For Gehring, it was the second national set of the season. He had a 712 in the same league back in October. The 26-year-old kegler has now recorded 24 in his brilliant career. "That's my ambition, to some day catch up with my age," Keith said.

Gehring rolled a 254 in his first game, 260 in the second and 224 in the third. For the four games he had a 918 series. He had a string of seven straight strikes in the 260 line. Keith is averaging 210 in the Sabre loop, carries a 196 average at Hahn's Lanes and a 194 at the 41 Bowl.

For Clement, it was the first sanctioned national count in a 12-year career. Roland has been over the 700 mark in exhibitions against the likes of Billy Hardwick and just recently Dave Soutar, but had never turned the trick in league competition. His previous high league series was 696. Roland is averaging 203 in the Sabre League this season. A strike in the 10th frame of the last game assured him of the 700. He had a booming 931 count for the four games.

Dan Mittag had the highest single game in the Sabre loop last night as he recorded 268 and finished with a 876 series. Other leading scores included Don Plass 256-860, Ken Kasperek 247-846, Stan Prue 227-827, Colin Dowling 822, Ken Rohloff 226-791, Al Chouinard 237-786 and Chuck Bayer 765.

Barbara Precourt had a 220 game for the women's team and other high scores from the City Employes League included Dick Graphos 595, Carl Beschta 225, Russ Knapton 585 and Don Montour 581.

Pete Herber led the Wrightstown National League at Van's Lanes as he cracked a 237 game and 646 series. Rick Pagel had a 599 set.

Oilers refuse deal for Hadl

SAN DIEGO (AP) —The Houston Oilers refused to take quarterback John Hadl and defensive end Deacon Jones in trade for their quarterback Dan Pastorini and defensive end Elvin Bethea, the San Diego Union said Monday.

The newspaper quoted John Breen, the Oilers' general manager, as confirming the proposed deal in a telephone interview Sunday night.

"It wasn't much of a proposal," commented Breen, adding he turned it down in "about 30 seconds."

Hadl, who turns 33 next month, says the Chargers and he have agreed that he ought to be traded.

Commented Breen: "What surprises me is what they think they can get for him. He's an 11-year veteran, isn't he?"

The player trade was reportedly proposed in Mobile, Ala., last week by Harland Svare, coach of San Diego's National Football League club. Svare would tell newsmen only: "I've been talking to people, many people, but the talks have taken no direction yet."

Elsner captures Governor's cup

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — Bob Elsner of New London, piloting a Artic Cat, won the three-mile Governor's Cup race Sunday in the Rib Mountain Snowmobile Classic.

Elsner, who also won the modified two and modified four division titles, beat out seven other drivers in the Governor's Cup event on the one-half mile Marathon Park oval.

Wrightstown '5' surprises

Xavier's Joe Schneider tallied 32 in leading the Hawks past St. John. Hortonville's Rob Reader moved into the individual scoring lead in the area with 32 against Omro and set the stage for a showdown with stingy Waupaca Friday.

Carl Joosten banked in 30 to pace Appleton West's overtime win over Kaukauna. Chris Fahrbach, St. Mary's young sensation, scored 25 in a losing cause to Fond du Lac Springs. Zephyr teammate Dave Michalkiewicz canned 42 in a pair of weekend contests.

NBA East stars listed

Havlicek again named

NEW YORK (AP) — New York's Dave DeBusschere and Atlanta's Pete Maravich will be in the starting lineup for the first time when the National Basketball Association holds its annual All-Star Game in Chicago Jan. 23.

NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy today announced the first eight players selected by writers and broadcasters to represent the East in the 23rd annual classic at Chicago Stadium.

John Havlicek of Boston was named for the eighth straight year, joining New York's Walt Frazier and DeBusschere, Atlanta's Maravich and Boston's Dave Cowens as starters.

Completing the first eight are Lou Hudson of Atlanta, Wes Unseld of Baltimore and Lenny Wilkens of Cleveland.

The eight coaches in the Eastern Conference will select six additional players for the East team. Since each NBA club must be represented by at least one player and no more than three, the coaches must pick at least one man from Buffalo, Houston and Philadelphia and no more than one additional player from New York, Boston or Atlanta.

Jack Werner joins Cyclones

The Cyclones (1-10 in the first semester) will return to action Wednesday with a non-conference game at Lawrence University against the Viking JVs. They'll meet the UW-Oshkosh freshman team Saturday.

Tony Kohl a teammate of Werner's at AHS-E, leads the Cyclones with 14-point and 20-rebound averages. Two schedule changes have been announced by Spencer. A home game against UW-Marinette has been changed from Feb. 6 to 7 and game at UW-Marathon County has been switched from Feb. 15 to 14.

Kaukauna girls win

KAUKAUNA — The Kaukauna High School girls basketball team opened Fox Valley Association play last week with a 45-29 victory over Oshkosh West.

The Ghosts jumped off to a 10-1 lead in the opening period and were never headed although the Indians managed to close the gap when Coach Fred Barribeau went to his bench and gave all 16 members of the team an opportunity to play.

Bitter cold

Bitterly cold weather is forecast to continue over most of the nation. Rain is forecast for Texas and Arkansas, changing to snow from northern Texas and New Mexico through the southern and western plains and eastern slopes of the Rockies. (AP Wirephoto map)

Icebox door stays open

Cold air will continue to pour southeast from Western Canada causing cold weather in the Fox Valley, according to United States Weather Bureau forecasters at Green Bay.

Skies will be fair and temperatures very cold tonight with a low near minus 10. Cloudiness will increase and cold abate somewhat Wednesday with a high near 15, according to forecasters.

Wind will be west at 6-10 m.p.h. tonight and Wednesday. Precipitation probability will be 5 per cent tonight and 10 per cent Wednesday.

The high temperature Monday in Appleton was 14 and the low dived to minus 10. At 9:30 a.m. today the barometer was 30.47 and steady and wind west at 10 m.p.h., according to Wisconsin Michigan Power Company. The humidity was 59 per cent.

Skies were clear and there was no precipitation. Wind chill at 9:30 a.m. was an estimated minus 30.

Elsewhere the temperature dropped to minus 21 in Spooner, the coldest spot in the state. The high Monday was recorded at Milwaukee and Madison each of which listed a 14 degree reading.

Wisconsin produce

MADISON — Wisconsin potato shippers moved an estimated total of 372 carlot equivalents last week, according to a report of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The sales represented 60 carlots more than the preceding week but 51 less than a year earlier. Of the sales 92 per cent were table stock, 3 per cent were chip stock and 5 per cent were certified seed.

Trading generally was active for available supplies, according to market reports. Because of a severe truck shortage some shippers still are behind in filling orders. A general price rise was noted for all varieties in Wisconsin. By the end of the week a raise of 25 to 50 cents per hundredweight had occurred in most packs.

Planners to meet HUD officials

The two top staff members of the East-Central Wisconsin Regional Planning Commission will travel to Milwaukee Wednesday for a daylong meeting with U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development officials on several topics, including the area's eligibility for funding.

Roy Willey, the new East-Central executive director, said numerous topics would be covered but that a key one would be certification of the new planning agency by HUD. A planning agency must meet certain requirements to gain certification, and then the municipalities and counties it serves are eligible for certain federal grants.

The region (East-Central covers a 10-county area) lost certification last year during the transition from the old East-Central to the new one but the state Department of Local Affairs and Development was granted temporary certification for the area to protect it against loss of federal grants. That temporary certification was slated to expire Dec. 31, 1972.

Willey, who will be accompanied on the Milwaukee trip by David Wendtland, East-Central regional planning director and former acting executive director, said he expected it would take about two months to prepare all the necessary information to submit to HUD for certification.

He expressed concern about getting the certification as quickly as possible to protect against funding loses to municipalities and counties but indicated the process is a complicated one. One of the questions he will seek an answer for from HUD will be exactly what data it will require East-Central to provide.

"We're playing a lot of catchup ball," Willey said, noting the preparation was delayed by the lengthy time it took to form the new agency. Willey came to the agency last month.

The certification, which is required for sewer and water and other vital grants, includes three areas — that an adequate regional planning agency exist, that it have a comprehensive planning program and that special functional planning have been done on sewer and water and open space needs.

Since some of the 10 member counties had not been a part of the old agencies, they probably will need more planning work before they can qualify for certain funding eligibility. However, the old East-Central and the former Fox Valley Council of Governments did considerable planning for their member counties and municipalities, much of which can be shifted for use in the new agency's certification.

No-credit classes offered in area

OSHKOSH — Five no-credit programs will be offered by the College of Continuing Education of the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh in Appleton and New London during the spring semester.

Three programs will be offered at the Appleton Public Library. "Parliamentary Procedure Workshop" will be taught by Dr. Joseph Mazza of the UWO speech department on four Tuesday evenings, Jan. 30 to Feb. 20.

Dr. David Chang of the UWO political science department will teach "Understanding Modern China" on three Thursday evenings, March 29 to April 12. "Puppetry" is the subject of the workshop to be taught by Dorlis M. Grubidge of the UWO speech department on five Wednesday evenings from April 4 to May 9, omitting April 18 as one of the class session dates.

These three classes will be held in the art room of the Appleton Public Library from 7 to 9 p.m.

The classes at New London will be in room B147 of the New London High School. "The Restless Atom" class, will be taught by Dr. Allen Utke of the UWO chemistry department, on Tuesday evenings, Feb. 13 to March 6. The class on "American Painting in the 20th Century" will be taught by T. Thomas Dewey of the UWO art department on Wednesday evenings, March 7 to April 25.

These classes also will meet from 7 to 9 p.m.

Interested persons may obtain further information about the courses as well as registration forms by contacting the College of Continuing Education at UW-Oshkosh.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Scientists at the Natural History Museum say African clawed frogs now abound in six miles of the west Mt. Helix and Sweetwater river drainages southeast of San Diego.

The slippery little frogs, growing to five inches long, devour insects and native frogs and are considered a threat to the balance of nature.

Sixty have been reported caught since a heavy rain washed them out of a pond. They were brought from Africa for use in pregnancy tests by scientists.

By 1978 the frogs are expected to infest marshlands throughout the area south and southeast of San Diego to the Mexican Border.

Pregnancy test case lost by Wisconsin Telephone

MADISON (AP) — The Wisconsin Telephone Co. was found guilty of sex discrimination Friday and ordered to treat employe maternity leaves the same as those for temporary disability.

The state Industry, Labor and Human Relations Commission told the firm to pay Miss Karen Smith of Milwaukee the benefits which she would have received if her leave had been treated the same as other disability leaves.

The 3-0 decision, which is the second under new state maternity leave guidelines adopted last year, is the first which would have a broad impact on a major firm, and it is expected to be appealed in the courts.

A "disparate treatment" of women employes disabled from work by pregnancy and childbirth "is not justified by any business necessity of record," the commissioners said.

Under the firm's policy, the state panel said, a woman on maternity leave accrues seniority for only the first month she is absent from work, while those on leave for other types of temporary disability accrue seniority for the entire period. And, it said, a woman on pregnancy or maternity leave must request leave for a fixed period of time while those on other types of temporary disability need not request leave for a fixed period.

Persons on temporary disability other than maternity leave receive payments from the firm for the first seven days according to seniority, the commissioners said, and disability benefits are paid after the first seven days to persons on temporary disability leave other than maternity leave.

The commissioners also said company policy allowed women on maternity leave to continue their basic medical insurance coverage only at their own expense, while other persons on temporary disability leave have their insurance expense borne by the company.

Mrs. Eisenhower, just back from a year-end vacation in Athens to visit her husband, said he had never had a wedding band.

Eisenhower, a Navy lieutenant, has been on sea duty in the Mediterranean and will end a six-month tour Feb. 15.

A milestone birthday

Nixon turns 60, looks ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, observing his milestone 60th birthday today, says he "hopes to do great things" in the first four years of his seventh decade.

He doesn't feel old, he says. And to keep thinking young he suggests looking to the future, not the past, and staying in contact with younger people.

Nixon granted a birthday-eve interview to two news-service reporters, provided the discussion was limited solely to his birthday reflections. He took time out from working on his inagural address for a 25-minute talk in his Executive Office Building hideaway.

The President said he doesn't like observing birthdays annually anymore and prefers to make note of them only on the decades—"every 10 years."

He cited his 10-year milestones starting at age 20 when he was "a junior in college, majoring in history and English, going out for football— "but I never made the team."

At 30, he was in Bougainville in the South Pacific in World War II. At 40, he had just been elected vice president. At 50, he was just defeated for the governorship of California and at 60, just re-elected for a second presidential term.

Never in those decades, "least of all at 50, did I expect to be here at this time at 60," Nixon commented.

He said he expects his daughters and Rebozo, who recently turned 60 himself, will give him a "pretty good kidding" about passing the milestone.

Nixon would not set an ideal age for the presidency because so much depends on the needs of the nation and the times, he said. But "the presidency is a very demanding position, physically, mentally and emotionally." Unless a man has "a remarkable physique in all these respects he should not seek the presidency at an age up in the late 60s," Nixon said.

The chief executive said there were plenty of exceptions and he pointed to men in their 70s and 80s that he had known, including President Dwight D. Eisenhower, German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, French President Charles de Gaulle and Japanese Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida. All these men, Nixon said, "did not look back, they were not living in the past, they were living in the future."

"Never slow down the brain, never slow down the spiritual heart, then age is not going to pull you down," the President said.

Nixon said boredom, rather than burdens of office, causes breakdown in health, and added that "the presidency has many problems but boredom is the least of them."

Talks show no signs of results

PARIS (AP) — Henry A. Kissinger conferred with Le Duc Tho for six hours today in the second session of their Vietnam peace talks as Hanoi declared in a broadcast that "there has not been any sign showing that the negotiations will reach any results."

President Nixon's national security adviser was the host of the meeting in an American-owned villa overlooking a golf course in suburban St. Nom la Breteche. As at Monday's meeting on Communist ground, there was no public handshaking between the two sides, reflecting the apparent chilly atmosphere of the talks following the massive American bombing raids on North Vietnam.

But Tho and his advisers emerged smiling from the villa at the end of the meeting, in marked contrast with their grim expressions when the meeting began. Kissinger also directed a wan smile toward waiting newsmen and photographers when he left the villa a few minutes later.

Both sides maintained their mutually agreed news blackout over the subjects under discussion.

The two delegations lunched in the villa, the property of a wealthy American businessman. It was not known whether Kissinger and Tho lunched together, but food was provided by the U.S. delegation.

While the meeting was in progress, President Georges Pompidou of France told a news conference he was "bitterly disappointed" when the talks broke down on Dec. 3.

"I hope with all my heart that the negotiations succeed this time," he added, "and that we will not have an eternal succession of discussions in Paris and bombing raids in North Vietnam."

Pompidou kept closely on touch with both sides during the interruption of the peace talks and his government played a role in backstage contacts that led to the bombing halt above the 20th parallel and resumption of the peace talks.

Summons of tax papers allowed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has a right to compel bookkeepers and accountants to turn over tax records of their clients, the Supreme Court held today by a 7-2 vote.

While specifically avoiding a hard and fast rule, the majority said a Roanoke, Va., restaurant operator had no right to assert her Fifth Amendment privilege against self-incrimination when her bookkeeper was hit with an Internal Revenue summons for her tax records.

In dissent, Justice William O. Douglas said the decision could lead to government invasions of privacy which will "stultify the exchange of ideas that we have considered crucial to our democracy."

Writing for the majority, Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr. said, "it is important to reiterate that the Fifth Amendment privilege is a personal privilege: It adheres basically to the person, not to the information which may incriminate him."

"The criterian for Fifth Amendment immunity remains not the ownership of property, but the 'physical or moral compulsion exerted, Powell wrote quoting from an earlier decision.

The case arose when Mrs. Lillian V. Couch appealed a Richmond Circuit Court decision which upheld the summons to her tax consultant. She claimed that the summons violated her Fifth Amendment rights and her rights under the Fourth Amendment to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures. Her records for 1964-1968 were summoned from Harold L. Shaffer, a bookkeeper who has aided Mrs. Couch with her taxes from his office above a drug store since 1955.

Mrs. Couch maintained that the Internal Revenue Service was not only examining her tax returns but was considering criminal prosecution.

Mrs. Couch's complaint stemmed from the revelation of possibly incriminating information, Powell wrote, not from the manner in which it was extracted.

Such divulgence, he continued, where the individual was not coerced, "is a necessary part of the process of law enforcement and tax investigaton."

Escorts can retaliate beyond 20th parallel

SAIGON (AP) — President Nixon has authorized U.S. fighter escorts to attack North Vietnamese MIGs or surface-to-air missile sites above the 20th parallel if they threaten American B52s below the northern limit Nixon has placed on the bombing of North Vietnam, reliable sources reported today.

The U.S. Command announced today that an Air Force F4 Phantom shot down a MIG21 along the 20th parallel Sunday when it threatened a flight of B52s.

U.S. sources outside the Command indicated today that Hanoi Radio was not lying when it reported last week that U.S. fighters escorting reconnaissance planes attacked antiaircraft defenses in Hoa Binh Province south of Hanoi. The U.S. Command denied at the time that American planes had bombed pre-selected targets above the 20th parallel, but it refused to comment on reconnaissance operations and what action fighter escorts might have taken.

It was the fifth MIG reported downed by U.S. crews since Dec. 18. The U.S. Command said a total of 183 North Vietnamese jets have been downed during the war.

Thirty-nine B52s dropped about 1,100 tons of bombs in the North Vietnamese panhandle during the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today, U.S. sources said.

Police convinced there was a second sniper

By GUY COATED
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Police Supt. Clarence Giarrusso says a sniper involved in the slayings of six persons slipped through a 200-man cordon from his hotel rooftop perch Monday either through "police negligence" or because he was super smart.

Giarrusso said Monday night he was convinced more than one sniper was responsible for killing the six and injuring 17 others in a two-day battle. But when pressed by newsmen, Giarrusso admitted there could have been just one sniper—the man killed by police gunfire Sunday night.

The central business district, which was cordoned off by police Monday, is to be opened to normal activity today, Mayor Moon Landrieu said.

As the floor-by-floor search of the hotel began, Giarrusso said, "If they don't turn up anyone...then he got away."

The theory of two or more snipers was based on "some" evidence, Giarrusso said, stressing that after a sniper was killed on the rooftop Sunday night, there were reports of gunfire coming from the roof and three officers were slightly wounded.

However, the superintendent admitted the possibility that the three were wounded by gunfire from fellow officers stationed in surrounding buildings.

He said he had other evidence, but would not elaborate.

A sharpshooter in an armor-plated Marine helicopter killed the sniper whose body lay on the rooftop all night and most of the day Monday.

The body was removed Monday evening and fingerprinted. Giarrusso said there was a tentative identification, but "I'm not going to announce anything tentative. When we are positive, I'll tell you."

He said he believes the shooting spree was part of a national conspiracy of black militants.

Rebel army goes into action in Rhodesia

LONDON (AP) — Under a moonless sky on the night of Dec. 21 ragged trousered raiders opened fire with rockets and bullets on Marc De Borchgrave's lonely farm house in the Zambezi Valley of Rhodesia.

Two nights later the black guerrillas struck again, against neighbor Archie Dagleish's place, where the De Borchgraves had taken refuge.

Within a few hours, a Jeepload of four Rhodesian soldiers taking part in a big sweep ran over a land mine.

The world's newest "liberation army" was in action. It even has its own Ho Chi Minh Trail, meandering from base camps in neighboring Mozambique to the sunbaked bushlands of northeast Rhodesia, 120 miles north of Salisbury, the capital.

Equipped also, so the Rhodesians say, with a modern armory of weapons from the Soviet Union or China.

The Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army, or Zanla, has vowed to wrest Rhodesia — which it calls Zimbabwe — from the grip of Premier Ian Smith's white minority government.

Since they still hope to play a role in Rhodesia, the British are following with great interest these developments in the African territory that declared its independence in 1965.

British experts think the black guerrillas have a long way to go and a lot to learn before they can pose any real threat to Smith's forces. In eight years of sporadic campaigning, they have achieved little.

Yet authorities here acknowledge the danger to the white regime is certain to increase as Zanla improves its techniques and its links with rebel movements in neighboring countries. The nearest and strongest of these is the Front for the Liberation of Mozambique, or Frelimo. By ambushes, night raids, mining of roads and railroads, Frelimo for years has pinned down thousands of Portuguese troops.

New fighting in northeast Rhodesia also creates yet another front for Smith's limited forces. Already he has 1,000 miles of frontier to defend eastward against incursions from Frelimo units in Mozambique, to the northwest against Zanla raids from Zambia, and on the southwest where Rhodesia meets Botswana. He is being helped by South African police units, and he is pressing for ever fiercer action by Portuguese forces.

This week Smith called up army, police and air force reservists to meet the developing emergency.

On Monday, a South African police car detonated a mine close to the Rhodesian-Zambian border, killing two South African policeman and injuring two others and three Rhodesians. The Rhodesian government said pamphlets from a terrorist organization operating in Zambia were found at the scene, and today it closed the border with Zambia. The Salisbury government demanded that the Zambian government "no longer permit terrorists to operate against Rhodesia from their territory."

The British are hoping that time and experience will yet convince Smith's regime that its ultimate salvation lies in a constitutional settlement with Britain.

Along with the security problem, Rhodesia now is in the grip of a choking drought. It still remains an outlaw among most nations. Old friends in Australia and New Zealand have lost power. Continuation of sanctions will go on sapping the country's economy.

All these things, in London's eyes, should strengthen the case of those Rhodesians who argue for a compromise with Britain.

Research into rehabilitation

Recommendations in Wisconsin to work toward more community-based correctional programs are in line with similar ideas expressed by officials of the National Council for Crime and Delinquency. The general charge is that rehabilitation is virtually impossible within the present institutional system.

Dr. Martin Groder will head a new Federal Center for Correctional Research at Camp Butner, North Carolina, where he will attempt just such rehabilitation within the institution. But some regulations concerning what will not be done already have been established.

The Center actually will be relatively small. There will be 140 psychiatric prisoners and 200 others carefully selected for research. The staff will number more than 200. "Transactional analysis" has been Dr. Groder's major method of dealing with prisoners in other programs.

One of the major criticisms of behavior research with prisoners has come from medical specialists and social workers, although not the general public. There are charges, especially in relation to a state institution in California, of the use of experimental methods such as electroshock, psychosurgery and drugs, not only on a temporary basis but to maintain peaceful prisoners even after they normally might not need such treatment. Indeterminate sentences, according to critics, have been used to extend the time in prison under such conditions. The aim has appeared to be not real rehabilitation but docility. A reader or viewer of Clockwork Orange knows to what hideous extent such practices can lead.

Dr. Groder insists none of this can or will happen at Butner. No prisoners with indeterminate sentences will be sent there and he has no plans for drug therapy or surgery or "aversive treatment."

If real rehabilitation takes place at Butner, it will be a major step forward. The success of such attempts at other institutions have so far not been noteworthy. Public apathy, lack of funds, a tendency to sentence offenders and forget about them have all contributed to the failures. More research is needed. Maybe Dr. Groder can provide some hopeful signs.

Amnesty is still a problem

Little has been mentioned in this country since the presidential election campaign about amnesty for draft evaders. While obviously time has to pass before emotions can cool and intelligent reasoning and action take place, a responsible Congress would move soon.

The United States has never in its history been in the situation that the Vietnam war conflict produced, in which a considerable number of young Americans opposed our participation in the war enough to risk severe penalties. The nearest case is that of the Civil War when it was also considered — in the Confederate states — the highest form of real patriotism to oppose the policies formed in Washington. Obviously the situations are far from identical but we can look at policies after the end of the Civil War for some precedence to use now.

The Constitution gives the President "power to grant reprieves and pardons for offenses against the United States." President Washington used this section in pardoning participants in the Whiskey Rebellion, armed violence on a small scale protesting a federal tax on home-made whiskey.

During the Civil War, President Lincoln made several offers of amnesty to southern troops but this was at least in part an attempt to end the war sooner. A universal amnesty bill for those who fought for the Confederacy or gave them aid and comfort was not passed by Congress until 1898. Later presidential amnesty decisions concerned relatively small numbers of men whose cases had been clumsily handled during World War II or who had run off after the Armistice of World War I. Along the way, there have been numerous incidents of harassment, even of conscientious objectors. The belligerent attitude needed for the successful waging of war does not permit much tolerance toward those who do not want to fight or otherwise help out in the fighting. Indeed it may be one of the lessons of Vietnam that a country not so dedicated cannot win and so shouldn't become committed in the first place.

Low digit syndrome

A perennial source of quiet amusement for the officers and clerks of the state Division of Motor Vehicles, we may suppose, is the eagerness of some persons to acquire the low digit motor vehicle license plates issued by the state for purposes of easy identification of vehicles for law enforcement, including the collection of the vehicle tax.

There is apparent a widespread belief that possession of one of the low number sets of plates defines the political or other branches of the Wisconsin aristocracy, for the names of the holders of these metal identification devices tend for the most part to be prominent men and women.

A Madison newspaper in a playful account of the zestful competition for such low numbers as proved by the long waiting line at the MVD offices one morning noted that a one digit plate list includes four Wisconsin members of the United States Congress, three state constitutional officers, one federal judge, and a small legion of lesser political figures.

The competition, indeed, is so anxious and apparently has such far-flung political connotations that the commissioner of the division, no less, has assumed direct charge of the distribution. Mr. Peterson has not held his office long. But he has occupied his desk long enough, apparently, to be sensitive to the anxieties of the prominent and influential in this regard.

Recently Secretary Clapp of the state Department of Transportation, a domain which includes Mr. Peterson, told an unhappy story of poverty in his agency and asked the governor to support him in a plan to save $500,000 a year by substituting one vehicle license plate for the pair of plates that the state has traditionally provided. His was a melancholy narrative, on the whole, and in the spirit of his anxious presentation we would offer a modest proposal.

The state now charges three dollars extra, for a total of $21.50, to those auto owners who want a special number or letter combination on their plates. It was a good idea by a member of the legislature several years ago. But it was too timid. According to the eager lines of special plate number applicants, the state could charge $10 or perhaps even $25, and thus abandon the idea of dropping the front-end identification on more than 2,000,000 Wisconsin motor vehicles. The state taxes virtually all other goods and services. Why not a tax on vanity and political ostentation?

Potomac fever —

It's reported that China is updating it's theories to fit new realities. They're following in Nixon's and Wallace's footsteps.

The Navy bought $1.7 million worth of Gap Instrument Corp. to keep them in business. Which makes a pretty big hole in that budget they're so worried about.

Nicaragua relief projects are being criticized — what they need is money. Unfortunately, Howard Hughes has left for Hyde Park after spending an uncomfortable night in his Mercedes.

Amtrak will be leasing two French trains for high-speed operations in the Midwest. Pretty racy.

Madison area spawns Democrat leaders

MADISON — The evidently settled positions of two comparatively young Madison politicians as the leaders of the Democrats in the legislature raises once more the old question about the evidently easy rise of Madison's ambitious men in state affairs.

The re-election without challenge of Rep. Norman Anderson as Assembly speaker ratifies his succession to that most visible legislative place that came with the resignation of another man two years ago.

At the same time Sen. Fred Risser, a neighbor and fellow lawyer, has been returned to the quarterback role for the Democrats of the Senate. He is thus promised more seniority in that capacity than has been earned by any other man since the rise of his party and, barring mishaps, marks him as the probable majority leader if the Democrats take over the Senate as many believe they will one day.

Tried once and failed

In the executive office sits Gov. Patrick J. Lucey, who is in as sure command of the majority party as any recent governor. He likes to describe himself as a Crawford County product. But he has spent his adult life in Madison, rose to party prominence here, and almost surely would not have prospered in politics had he chosen to make his career in the state's remote southwestern corner.

It is often forgotten, indeed, that he attempted a political career in his home locality, failed, and then moved.

For more than a decade both United States Senators have called Madison home. Sen. Nelson, indeed, attempted a political career in his home county of Polk, failed in 1946, came to Madison and was elected to the state legislature two years later and has held office without interruption since.

That Nelson and colleague Proxmire will run for nominations without difficulty in the future is accepted without reservation, whatever the Republicans may have in store for them.

The capital city almost always has a member of the party's national committee. It has thrust into the limelight recently such younger men as Charles Smith as the state treasurer, largely because he was a Madison Democrat, and young Bronson LaFollette as two time attorney general and then nominee for governor.

Metropolitan Madison is a sizeable constituency of nearly a quarter of a million. Size is a factor. But it does not explain the Democratic strength. Milwaukee County has more than a million residents. It has not been able to challenge the Madison liberal establishment in party affairs. In the statehouse, its influence is in weight of numbers rather than intiative, leadership, strategy, or policy control.

Secure in their careers

Madison is so surely liberal that its aspiring young men find security in political careers, once they have won a place, even as was the Fox Valley for Republicans in earlier times. It is the center of political communications for the state. Thus the rewards in recognition and identity are quicker and more sure than in any other locality or district. Parttime politics is more convenient for ambitious men and women, and notably for lawyers.

Rep. Midge Miller, in her second term in the Assembly, is surely one of the best known spokesmen for women in politics in Wisconsin.

Anderson and Risser can walk from their law offices to the Capitol in no more than a few minutes. Their legislative colleagues for the most part spend a couple of days each week traveling to and from their homes and private affairs. For the Madison man there is financial gain in the legislature if he is a lawyer. For many others there is little or none.

Madison is dominated by its public service employes, in the big state agencies and the university. Legislative office, therefore, is closer to the constituents than elsewhere. In other situations aldermen, mayors, sheriffs, and county leaders have more identity.

In Milwaukee one of the chief reasons for the infrequency of top legislative representation is the fact that the legislature is an apprenticeship — in the typical view — for a more pleasant and remunerative place on the city council of the county board. Result: true political power for Milwaukee in the statehouse is rare.

Meany writes Roche's column

(This column and one to follow were written by George Meany, the president of the AFL-CIO.)

We of the labor movement are constantly being called all sorts of terrible names because we still believe there are wolves in the world. For instance, we are denounced as "Cold War Dinosaurs" because we refuse to take the Soviet "trade union movement" seriously. What we know is that this bogus union is headed by a secret policeman — it's as much of a union as the old Nazi "Labor Front."

We refuse to be taken in by the neo isolationists who say that the rest of the world is none of our business. It's too bad about the Soviet Jews, they say, but that's their internal affair. We can't be the policeman of the world.

A lecture undelivered

Well, I don't suggest that we should be the policeman of the world, but I would urge some of our intellectual friends to read the Nobel lecture of Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn — the lecture he couldn't deliver because the Russian government wouldn't allow him to accept the prize. "There are no 'internal affairs' left on our crowded earth," wrote Solzhenitsyn. "And mankind's sole salvation lies in everyone making everything his business; in the people of the East being vitally concerned with what is thought in the West; the people of the West vitally concerned with what goes on in the East."

We in the American labor movement are vitally concerned. For example, you don't have to be Jewish to like Israel. You just have to believe in certain principles — which happen coincidentally to be the principles of our labor movement. What are they?

First is a belief in democracy. But, of course, everybody believes in democracy. Maybe so... but there are a number of people who, when pushed, qualify this. They are for democracy but... they are for democracy under certain conditions. How often have you heard so-called sophisticated people say, "Oh, I'm all for democracy, but let's face it: you can't have democracy in the underdeveloped countries" — in what they fashionably call the "Third World."

This form of cultural snobbery turned up a while back in the "New York Times Magazine" when Professor John Kenneth Galbraith presented his thoughts on a recent trip to China. He was very impressed by what he saw, but we found his views in one area particularly interesting. As you may know, Dr. Galbraith thinks that trade unions are obsolete in a country like the United States — they keep making trouble for economic "experts." He looked around for unions in Communist China, but there weren't any. He concluded, "Unions seem to have been a casualty of the Cultural Revolution. The Chinese are assigned to jobs and they are required to remain where they are assigned."

Galbraith sums up

Well, I guess that explains why there are no unions. You can't have unions in a society where people are forced to work when and where the government tells them to. But what does the liberal professor think of this system? Listen: "The Chinese economy isn't the American or European future. But it is the Chinese future. And let there be no doubt: for the Chinese it works."

In other words, it's no good for us Americans and other enlightened folks, but it's okay for the Chinese. It's okay if they don't have unions. It's okay if they can't choose where and when to work. After all, as Galbraith sees it, they're just Chinese. They don't know any better.

This may be the fashionable way of thinking in some intellectual circles, but — if anyone is interested in a plumber's view — it is narrow-minded, bigoted, and patronizing. And for those of us with good memories it has a curious resemblance to a line we used to hear: "Nazism is not for Americans, but it's the kind of system the Germans need."

Here's word quiz on famous people

Today's little quiz, for a change, is not strictly about words, but about famous people in fact, fiction, or mythology. Half right is a darned good score.

1. Everyone knows that David, in the Bible, was an Israelite: but what nationality was Goliath?

2. What celebrated writers died (a) in a tavern brawl; (b) in a sailing accident; (c) from a heart attack while rescuing a young girl from drowning in his own lake?

3. Who was the "Merchant of Venice" in Shakespeare's play? (I've asked this before, but just want to see if it took.)

4. Why is the Roman Pope sometimes called the "Pontiff"?

5. How long did Adam reside in the Garden of Eden, according to the early Talmudists?

6. Who was the most famous foreign correspondent for the New York Tribune? (He wrote his dispatches from London, but that's not much help.)

7. Scheherazade, of course, is the lady who told the "Thousand and One Tales" in the Arabian Nights — but to whom?

8. Who was the real-life character whose adventures inspired Daniel De Foe's novel, "Robinson Crusoe"?

9. What two great mythic heroes tried to avoid military service by (a) feigning madness, (b) dressing up like a woman?

10. Who condemned to death his own two sons for conspiracy?

ANSWERS:

1. A Philistine.

2. (a) Christopher Marlowe; (b) Shelley; (c) W. S. Gilbert.

3. Antonio. (No, not Shylock, you dummkopf; he was a money-lender, not a merchant.)

4. Because the highest class of the Roman priesthood had to superintend the construction of the bridges (pontes).

5. Only 12 hours.

6. Karl Marx.

7. To the sultan, Schahriah.

8. Alexander Selkirk, who spent four-and-a-half years on a desert island with only a gun and ammunition, before he was rescued in 1709.

9. (a) Ulysses, and (b) Achilles, both of whom tried to draft-dodge the Trojan War.

10. Brutus, as first consul of Rome, when his sons, were charged with conspiracy to restore the banished Tarquin to the throne.

Government to begin study of coral reefs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Predicting environmental health through measurement of coral reef chemistry and biology is the aim of a series of underwater investigations conducted by the Commerce Department's National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration.

Teams of scientists are spending seven days each in a Hydro-Lab, under 50 feet of water off Grand Bahama Island. They will study the coral reef and its creatures. Because the reef populations react to environmental change, scientists believe that prediction of their environmental health will be possible through studies of photosynthesis and respiration rates related to the total energy reaching the reef.

HALIFAX (AP) — The post office announced it would use the designation Nova Scotia instead of N.S. on all its stamped postal cards depicting scenes of the province.

The action came after criticism from a local paper, which said the abbreviation could mean "no soap" to someone unfamiliar with its meaning.

Central Park gets ancient play garden

The newly opened playground is based on the architecture of the ancient Middle East. There are pyramids and obelisks to climb and water runs in aqueducts of antique design.

Post-Crescent Madison bureau

MADISON — The new session of the state legislature will be the stage for a new round of one of the most acrimonious, perennial struggles the lawmakers are called upon to arbitrate.

It is the continued quarrel between the chiropractors and the medical doctors about the rights and the aspirations of the former.

Considered in numbers of combatants, the contest appears uneven. There are only about 440 chiropractors holding Wisconsin state licenses, but their professional society says only about 325 are now in active practice here. There are about 5,000 Wisconsin-licensed physicians, and about 4,400 of them are actively treating patients, according to their professional organization.

Yet the chiropractors have been winning rounds in the political arena as they demand an enlargement of their rights. The physicians recognize their gains, and are alarmed about them and determined to resist more effectively in the legislative process.

For many years the physicians were able to persuade the legislature that chiropractic should not be eligible for public recognition and support, as in eligibility for reimbursement under public indemnity and health care laws. The issue that was fought over for many years centered on the issue of permitting patients receiving indemnities under the workmen's compensation law to be reimbursed for the services of a chiropractor. Two years ago, amid shock that shook the State Medical Society, the chiropractors triumphed with their bill to make them eligible and persuaded Gov. Patrick J. Lucey to sign it in defiance of the appeals of the State Medical Society.

Now a second chapter of the classic struggle is opening, as the chiropractors prepare to press the legislature for the right to reimbursement for services rendered to patients receiving Medicaid, and under general health insurance policies.

The Medical Society will use its utmost resources to resist both demands, and it recently won an important boost with the publication of a hostile report on chiropractic by the Governor's Task Force on Health.

That document urged that "the state refuse to permit the use of any public resources for any purpose which would tend to further the use of chiropractic," specifically denounced the idea of covering chiropractic under health insurance, demanded the repeal of chiropractic treatment eligibility for workmen's compensation reimbursement, and proposed a state-sponsored program of "education" to inform citizens of the lack of scientific basis for chiropractic.

That report infuriated the chiropractors, who have recently elevated the man who handled their lobbying work in the 1971 legislature to be the executive director of their state society. He is Carl Lauri, a former state senator, who has denounced the Lucey task force as "loaded with doctors". Lauri points to the recent approval by the Congress of chiropractic service reimbursement for care to Medicare patients as an indication of the drift of opinion in the country.

Thus far the chiropractors have evidently been more enterprising and more effective in grass roots political activity, including involvement in the campaigns of candidates for the legislature who must make the decisions to enact the laws they seek.

"Our people have been active, and that is legitimate enterprise for the citizen," he remarks.

Leaders of the Medical Society also have appealed to their colleagues for more political involvement, and at the last annual meeting of the group levied an assessment of $10 upon each member to finance a special "educational campaign." That effort will be directed to the cultivation of public and political opinion in the new legislative session, according to plans.

One of the effective methods on behalf of chiopractors has been a substantial volume of mail from their patients to legislators, including those many who have rural and small town constituencies. The prompting of such mail is regarded by most physicians as ethically improper, according to one Medical Society spokesmen. Physicians are also less available for active political campaign assistance to legislative candidates, other observers have noted.

Construction costs increase at Kaukauna

KAUKAUNA — Construction costs including building, electrical, plumbing, excavating and heating work done in the city during 1972 amounted to $1,509,249, an increase of $73,816 over the 1971 total of $1,435,433 according to the annual report released Monday by Building Inspector Harold Loeser.

This is the fourth time in eight years that building has dipped below the $2,000,000 mark.

Residential construction increase with 44 homes costing $893,708 built in 1972 compared to 37 costing $724,435 in 1971. Home remodeling projects numbered 128 costing $164,053 in 1972 compared to 89 costing $115,866 in 1971. Garages and accessory buildings constructed in 1972 amounted to 41 costing $69,255 compared to 31 costing $34,061 in 1972.

The 1972 report shows one new commercial building costing $24,000 compared to two costing $66,500 in 1971. New industrial projects for last year cost $13,500 for two projects compared to one costing $5,500 in 1971. Commercial alteration work in 1971 included 10 projects costing $19,695 compared to 12 costing $13,758 in 1972.

No institutional construction was listed for 1972, whereas two projects cost $152,927 in 1971. Revenue produced from building permits amounted to $5,052 in 1972 compared to $4,209 in 1971.

Three young men make up Delavan mod squad

DELAVAN, Wis. (AP) — They called them pigs in high school, but three youthful members of the Delavan Police Department have become that city's "Mod Squad."

Dave Klawes, 21, Tim O'Neill, 20, and Steve Loudon, 18, all feel they are an important link between the police department and their community.

O'Neill and Loudon started at the department as freshman and sophomore in high school, respectively. They helped with photography, bicycle registrations, recovering stolen articles and other odd jobs.

As a result they sort of grew up with the department over the years, including in an Explorer Scout police cadet program. For a few months they rode with an officer in a squad car, experiencing the everyday trials and emergencies of law enforcement.

Now Loudon is a full-time dispatcher and officer and O'Neill a part-time reserve officer. Both are attending a police science program at Gateway Technical Institute in Kenosha, aiming for an associate degree.

Klawes — veteran of the three at 21—learned his way around the department as a photographer for the Delavan Enterprise.

He began as a dispatcher and learned filing procedures and department policies, then completed the two-year course at Gateway before joining the department as a full-time officer.

There are few complaints from the three—they love what they are doing. Age seems to be more of an advantage than a problem.

They had their problems in high school, but critics have "grown out of that stage," O'Neill said. "They have changed, and now realize how immature name-calling really is.

Both agreed most of the verbal jabs were in jest, but said it wasn't fun to hear "oink-oink" or "pig" as they walked down school corridors.

"I do my best, and that's all anyone can expect me to do," O'Neill says, adding that he no longer has trouble with young people. He said older people sometimes question his authority.

All three consider themselves "law and order" men who want to help people and improve society. All plan to make it a career.

O'Neill, who began riding in squad cars in his freshman year in high school, said he wasn't aware of all the problems Delavan has.

"The same things happen here as in larger cities," he said. "It's just on a smaller scale. The average citizen doesn't realize all the problems."

The three agree that they owe their success to other officers and to cooperation within the community, and they agree police work is not easy.

"Before I came here, I thought of police as super people without any hangups," Loudon said. "But they do have them just like anybody else."

They report support from their families, although Loudon lost one girl friend when he began work on the night shift.

"My parents didn't think it was such a good idea at first," he said. "But now they're used to it and they follow us around on the police monoter."

Jean Haynes, 22, an auto factory worker in Coventry, England, says she sneezed Saturday — and was able to hear well for the first time in her life. She had been nearly deaf since birth. Doctors said the sneeze, and several recent sneezes caused by an allergy, apparently unblocked a tube connecting her middle ear and nose. (AP Wirephoto)

Responsibility for conditions in jails to undergo court review

WASHINGTON (AP) — The suicide of a Texas youth has prompted the Supreme Court to review the government's responsibility over conditions in local jails.

On any given day, about 4,000 federal prisoners are in state and local jails waiting to be tried or sentenced.

The jails often are overcrowded and the facilities substandard, Chief Judge John R. Brown of the U.S. Circuit Court has said. Inmates routinely subject other prisoners to "varieties of subhuman treatment that no citizen of a civilized nation ... should be compelled to endure," Brown wrote last July.

The judge and two others, John Minor Wisdom and Irving L. Goldberg, wanted their court to reconsider its ruling that the parents of the youth, Reagan E. Logue of Corpus Christi, were not entitled to damages for his death.

They lost, 12 to 3, but on Monday the Supreme Court agreed to hear the parents' appeal.

The 18-year-old boy faced federal trial on charges of conspiring to smuggle 229 pounds of marijuana into the United States when he was placed in the Nueces County jail.

Doctors, mindful of a suicide attempt and a diagnosis that the youth was acutely psychotic, had recommended he be kept in a hospital, the appeal said.

The parents are seeking the $5,000 in damages awarded in 1971 by U.S. Dist. Court Judge Owen D. Cox of Corpus Christi but reversed by the Circuit Court.

The appeal tests whether the U.S. government is exempt from liability under federal law. But, it also says, there is a deeper, fundamentally moral issue at stake: "the conditions to which the federal government subjects its prisoners when it turns them over to local jails."

The Justice Department opposed the review.

"If, as petitioners allege, conditions in nonfederal prison facilities are substandard, and the decision to utilize such facilities for the temporary incarceration of federal prisoners is unwise, this is a matter for congressional resolution," said Solicitor General Erwin N. Griswold in a Nov. 30 memorandum.

The case will be argued before the court in March or April with a final decision due before the end of June.

In another action Monday the justices cut down a major women's-rights case. Also from Texas, that case tested a state regulation forcing pregnant women to leave their jobs after the seventh month.

In the appeal, Mary Ellen Schattman of Austin contended the inflexible policy of the Texas Employment Commission violates the equal-job rights of pregnant women.

She said the only physical effort in the job involved picking up file folders. Her doctor told her there was no reason she could not keep working until two weeks before delivery, the appeal said.

Last March, the circuit court in New Orleans found the regulation to be neither unreasonable nor arbitrary. This reversed Dist. Court Judge Jack Roberts of Austin who had declared the regulation invalid.

The Supreme Court rejected Mrs. Schattman's appeal without comment or dissent.

The court also set the stage for a major ruling on procedures used by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to determine the effectiveness of drugs and to control drugs already on the market.

The review, to begin with hearings this spring, concerns the powers granted the federal agency by Congress in 1962 amendments to the federal drug laws. Generally, the FDA was given authority to guard consumers against ineffective drugs.

One case specifically involves an order withdrawing approval of Lutrexin, a drug manufactured by Hynson, Westcott and Dunning, Inc., and used for premature labor and abortion.

The government, in an appeal, claimed a decision against the FDA by the U.S. Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., last May could impair its enforcement of 1962 federal drug laws designed to guard consumers against ineffective drugs.

The Baltimore firm, in a cross-appeal, asked the Supreme Court to restrict FDA's power to force off the shelves drugs that had been approved as safe before 1962.

The justices, at the same time, agreed to hear a government appeal from a ruling that limits the FDA's control over drugs already on the market.

TV asks for self-regulation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The television industry has responded to a petition to prohibit all commercials on children's programs with a plea that it be allowed to continue with self-regulation.

"This is not so much a plea for gradualism but rather a plea to use the apparatus we have," Stockton Helffrich, director of the National Association of Broadcasters' code authority, told the Federal Communications Commission Monday.

"...In the current climate of change, where all of us want improvements in our society's imperfections which most stand out, there is a prevailing temptation to malign and negate that which has been laboriously built ....

"The code—in my opinion, wisely—makes haste slowly. It cannot move faster than the necessary fact-gathering and due process permit. That is a positive, really; where the establishment of new policies pertain, better right than sorry."

Helffrich told the commission he questions a suggestion that a minority of public members be added to the code review board.

That suggestion was advanced by the Rev. Edward A. Powers, general secretary of the division of Christian education of the United Church of Christ.

"The NAB code review board," he said, "should be augmented by the presence of public members to evaluate children's programming and to act as advisers to the NAB board of directors with respect to the needs of children and how they should be fulfilled."

The Rev. Mr. Powers said these members should not be named by the industry, but rather by such groups as the League of Women Voters, the National Education Association, the AFL-CIO, and Action for Children's Television—ACT.

The FCC is holding hearings on a petition by ACT, a citizens' group based in Newtonville, Mass., to ban all commercials from children's TV programs and to require at least 14 hours weekly of programs aimed at specific age groups from 2 to 12.

All three networks—American Broadcasting Co., the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Co.—testified against the proposal.

For NBC, Howard Monderer said his network has "tried on a planned basis over the last seven years to do what our critics are asking you to force us to do," only to see it lose a quarter of its children's audience and to suffer a decline in revenues.

"ABC strongly rejects" the proposed ban on commercials, Thomas N. Frohock said, "in part because it is impractical and in part because it would lead almost certainly to a decline in such programming."

For CBS, Michael Goldey said there is no evidence to prove the theory that the ACT proposals would result in better programs.

Jury selection proceeds for 'Camp McCoy 3'

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The trial of the "Camp McCoy 3," whose participants have been trimmed to two, had more jury selection on its agenda today in U.S. District Court.

Stephen T. Geden of Milton, Mass., and Thomas M. Chase of Glenrock, N.J., were named in a four-count indictment stemming from bomb blasts in 1970 during National Guard and Army reserve summer training sessions at Camp McCoy.

Charges against Dannie E. Kreps, Torrance, Calif., have been dismissed on grounds he had not been advised of his rights when he testified before a grand jury.

Explosives planted under buildings at the training camp 80 miles northwest of Madison damaged an electric power substation, a waterworks and a telephone office. There were no injuries.

Antiwar campus groups supporting the "Camp McCoy 3" picketed the Federal Building when jury selection began Monday. Some of the estimated 80 demonstrators protested loudly when told there were not enough seats in the courtroom to accommodate them all.

Doctors advise rest for Uganda's Idi Amin

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — President Idi Amin has been advised by his doctors to rest at home and the government radio says Defense Minister Charles Oboth-Ofumbi will assume Amin's duties temporarily.

Radio Uganda broadcast the news on Monday but did not disclose the reason why doctors prescribed rest for Amin or how long he will be absent from his office.

Australians end U.S. boycott

SYDNEY (AP) — The two-week-old boycott protesting the American bombing of North Vietnam was called off today by the Australian Maritime Union. Two other unions involved in the boycott are expected to follow suit.

Maritime Union Secretary Elliott V. Elliott said the boycott was stopped at the request of the Australian Council of Trade Unions, but that members had the right to resume it. He said the ban was worthwhile because of the worldwide reaction it provoked.

One of the results was a retaliatory boycott of Australian ships by longshoremen on the U.S. East Coast. Nine Australian ships carrying meat and wool have been tied up. Only two American ships were affected by the Australian boycott.

Future UW students invited to sessions

MADISON — The fifth in a series of seven special programs designed to provide whatever information prospective University of Wisconsin Madison students may need will be held from 3 to 3:50 p.m. Jan. 23.

The session will stress nursing and pharmacy course offerings, among others. It will be held at the University of Wisconsin-Menasha Center campus.

The program will be presented via UW Extension facilities, and feature campus personnel who will answer questions on programs, housing, and financial aids.

Succeeding sessions will be held at the same location Feb. 13 and March 6. These will relate to placement testing, advising, registration procedures, other course offerings, and allied concerns.

Why Nixon resumed N. Vietnam bombing

WASHINGTON — The real purpose of President Nixon's draconian decision to unleash American bombers over Hanoi and Haiphong last month was to buy more time for Saigon and cripple Hanoi's warmaking potential, not to "force" North Vietnam back to the bargaining table.

Whether the savage aerial bombardment will in the end have those effects is still undetermined. However, the objective evidence so far is that it will.

Thus, South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu is singing a different tune today than he was on Oct. 20, when he kept Henry Kissinger President Nixon's chief foreign policy adviser, cooling his heels in Saigon for almost 24 hours.

Thieu will abide by terms

At that time, Thieu's intransigence was total. Today, Thieu is letting it be known that, even if he regards a ceasefire agreement between Washington and Hanoi as unacceptable, he will abide by its terms with or without his own signature.

One explanation for this most important change in Thieu is the fact that North Vietnam's major cities have now been devastated with an estimated several hundred thousand civilians evacuated to the countryside. Another reason, also derived from the renewed bombing, is that Thieu now has had almost three full months to propagandize his own country and prepare it for the radically different political situation that will follow a ceasefire.

Accordingly, in terms of relative strengths, North and South Vietnam have been on reverse courses: Saigon strengthened both by Thieu's political activity and the addition of huge amounts of new U.S. arms; Hanoi weakened under the most remorseless pounding from the air in history.

The full effect of that aerial bombardment is still not known, but an editorial in Hanoi's Communist party newspaper, Nhan Dan, broadcast through North Vietnam two days ago, gives a shuddering glimpse.

"In the recent days of fierce fighting," the editorial said, "tens of thousands of compatriots in Hanoi . . . have left the city . . . Our urban compatriots understand that evacuation is aimed at creating conditions for our armed forces to fight and win. Let each of us endeavor to implement the policy according to which only people required for combat, combat support, production and communications and transportation activities remain in the cities."

The "duty" of the rural provinces, the editorial continues, "is to serve the people properly by supplying them food, foodstuffs, and staple goods so that the evacuees can stabilize their lives quickly."

Although couched mostly in flat, bureaucratic prose, the editorial hinted at the tensions and panic produced by the bombing. Thus, political cadres "have cooperated in motivating the compatriots to evacuate and in assisting families in their travel."

Agreement appears near

Beyond that, longtime Hanoi-watchers here strongly suspect that Hanoi knew the bombing would halt as a precondition for the new round of Paris talks. On the basis of its past actions, Hanoi would not have risked blocking all chance of more negotiations without hard knowledge that Mr. Nixon had put a terminal point on the bombing.

Consequently, with Thieu softened up by more time and arms and with Hanoi softened up by the devastation of bombing, the prospect of Kissinger finally reaching agreement at Paris within the next three weeks is better than 50-50.

But Hanoi still has one ace in the hole: the possibility — still less than even — that the new congress might undercut Kissinger's bargaining power by imposing a fund cut-off for all aid to Saigon.

Thus, if there is any logic left in the decisions of the principal actors in America's longest war, the upcoming round of negotiations in Paris should be the final round. If it is not, Mr. Nixon will confront an excruciating dilemma: he could renew the bombing at the risk of alienating U.S. allies, probably forcing cancellation of his plans to visit Europe next spring. Or he could sell out Saigon, something he has sworn never to do.

UW tenure review proposal dropped

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Periodic review of the tenure status of University of Wisconsin professors was removed Thursday from legislation being prepared by the Merger Implementation Committee.

The panel of lawmakers, regents and others voted 6-5 to include instead a "review of faculty performance" unrelated to tenure decisions in its proposed bill.

Tenure is the job security given a faculty member upon attainment of the rank of professor or associate professor. If a faculty member does not attain tenure in seven years, he usually loses his job. The decision on whether to grant tenure rests with a faculty member's tenured colleagues.

A proposal by Secretary of Administration Joe E. Nusbaum that tenure be periodically reviewed was interpreted by spokesmen for the UW faculty as a threat to academic freedom.

Funds to be raised for ABC

The Appleton Area Clergy Association has endorsed Jan. 21 as ABC (A Better Chance) for all the churches in the area as a method of expressing Christian concern and brotherly love.

A total of 18 students are attending three Appleton high schools as part of the program, which also enables the residents to become better acquainted with people from a different way of life.

Special presentations will be made during the Jan. 21 church services by ABC board representatives and envelopes for contributions will be circulated.

Funds are needed to make up the $7,000 deficit in the $34,000 budget. The ABC board hopes it can raise this through the ABC Sunday.

"With 28 churches in this area, we are certain we can raise that amount," said Marwin Wrolstad, chairman of the special committee for the Sunday and a member of the ABC board.

Persons interested in contributing on their own, may send donations directly to ABC Sunday, Box 424, Appleton.

The Appleton ABC annual membership meeting has been scheduled for 8 p.m. Jan. 23 at the St. Bernard Parish Center. Fred Easter, regional director of ABC from Carleton College, will be the speaker.

U.S. poverty guidelines raised by about $193

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department has raised the income guidelines used by the government to determine whether a person is poor.

The department announced recently that the new levels are about $193 higher than last year's. The guidelines are used to determine eligibility for federal programs for the poor.

Under the new guidelines, a single person living in a nonfarm area of the continental United States is considered poor if he has a net income of less than $2,100 a year. The poverty level for a nonfarm family of four is $4,200.
